Introduction

Deluded psychopaths breed worldwide.

The great human endeavour is controlled by psychopaths, feminists, extremists, binaries, self interest and corruption - killing all question, hypothesis, exploration and discovery.

Instant outrage and abuse grows and debate and tolerance continues to decline. Everyone doubles down on their sunk cost of certainty. Violence brews and bubbles “double, double, toil and trouble” fed by government paid “mad witches”/feminists (in highly paid government positions and fake nonsense jobs), binary thinkers, extremists, women (on average - think average wages) and weak minded men. Virtue signalers and tyrants everywhere for hysterical binary certainty. Groupthink and identity politics of the tribes dominates. Language is corrupted by calling first tribes - first “nations” as if tribes and nations are the same thing.

There is no vigilance against corruption and no leader willing to stand up to it. Most are tyrants, dictators, corrupt - who seek to maintain popularity by implementing “certain safety” totalitarian pogroms, dividing society, stoking fears and anxiety, demonizing “others”, appealing to mobs, special interest and shrill women’s groups. Elites do favours for each other and failed politicians are handed highly paid jobs in the public service as a reward for their special relationships while in parliament.”Everybody does it”, “I am NO WORSE than other corrupt people” (race to the bottom) is the answer to the media and the public.

Human rights is mandated for the elites and special victims and removed for the ordinary man under the banner of the dogmatic and biased “Human Rights” agencies run by smug feminists spewing their permanent entitled/outrage idiotology and new fangled/mangled language (inclusive, diverse, correctspeak) and terminology for the certain “cause”. Privacy is legislated, declared and managed by the state as constant daily intrusion, record keeping and mandated medical procedures with all information sold to the highest bidder and given to police and other bully and abuse squads. A culture of demonization, accusations, trial by allegation, mob vigilantism, media inciting outrage, violence and groupthink - baying for blood of those who dare to challenge the “righteous cause of certainty” and smug mob “justice”.

Courts, Registrars, Magistrates, Investigators, Commissioners - all the layers of government beaurocracy are filled with corrupt virtue signalers for their own certain causes. Openness, probity and any semblance of truth is ignored in favour of certain bias and smug virtue. The Cult of Victim. The Cult of Women. The Cult of Identity. Groupthink. This is not so much wide spread mob or crowd delusion but each individual is deluded in their own special way and enjoys working with other deluded individuals because of the corruption they can indulge in together. Power and Corruption binds them in a unity ticket. People’s money flows to fill the coffers of the corrupt or to the sycophants and their families. The corrupt are all in this together.

Pig-ignorant, smug politicians constantly signaling their own virtue (with our money), lying in courts (I can't remember, I wasn't there, everybody does it), ignoring questions, ignoring everyone who does not agree with them or give them money in plastic shopping bags, feeding their own corruption, signaling their special identity - I'm black, I'm a jew, I'm an asian lesbian, I'm a migrant, I'm a permanent victim, I'm a permanent hero - as justification for their ignorance, corruption, narcissistic delusions and abuse and demonization of "others".

Feminists use their public paid positions to promote women only causes and advance women ahead of better qualified men based on the entitled victim/perpetrator narrative as men and boys are demonized on a daily basis in schools, universities, courts, media and the public service. Transparent bias, corruption and nepotism is considered "good" for the right causes. State premiers say "everyone does it" signaling government sponsored corruption (office of women, special grants for special people, etc). Bribes, graft and corruption and transacted openly as virtue for "good business" and "the right causes". Merit and talent are replaced by nepotism and identity politics ensuing a constant lowering of education and other community standards. It is not what you know but who you know and which in-group you belong to.

The truth about obvious corruption or anything of fact is attacked and destroyed by destroying those who dare to ask and explore. Demonizing them personally in the senate, using media to personally attack and invoke mob responses, locking them away in secret prisons, dragging them through courts, torturing them in far away prison camps, cancelling their public speech, removing them and their family and friends from jobs and society, encouraging mob vigilantism, rewarding and encouraging false testimony for the certain cause of "victim", poisoning detractors, summary trial, instant judgement, government sponsored spies, authoritarianism and constant public scrutiny and "investigations" of individuals by heavy handed police, technology based intrusion of private lives, informers (paid to inform on others, point the finger, gaining "social credit" and "virtue") - others rewarded by great publicity and "Awards" by sick-minded politicians and corrupt government media for "calling out" the certain demons of society so the vigilantes can extract their blood while baying at the moon and walking on two feet in their smug swill of certainty. Awards and ceremonies for the deluded bigots, haters and destroyers of humanity - psychopathic liars paid by police, rewarded by the ABC and governments to manufacture wholly false narratives against anyone they choose in the sake of "certain" causes and their virtue and promotion.

The fact that women lie is not able to be believed - anyone who dares to suggest the concept that women lie about "being a victim" in family courts - in media, celebrity princess victims (and their weak minded sentient pet men) - is brutally attacked by women who occupy media, university, school, public service, politics, charities and courts. Men are demonized as rapists, murderers, destroyers of culture, violent, etc as women in schools and universities lecture and pontificate to little boys on how to behave as "men" and "respect all women" by virtue signalers wearing white ribbons to constantly respect the "certain victim" group. Courts full of man-hating feminists and weak minded virtue signaling men attacking and demonizing the "out-group" (white men) and letting blacks, women and other designated victim classes (the elites) walk free. (ACT Magistrates come to mind)

Trust has gone - "what can you do?" echoes around the world by the diminishing number of humans able to notice what is going on. Individuals are attacked and sought out by the mobs - mobs rage through the streets at night and in broad daylight looting, pillaging, destroying, burning down democracy, shitting and fornicating in the streets of America and destroying humanity as quickly as they can while virtue signaling government elites busy themselves washing the feet of the designated victims in grand displays of their own personal glory and virtue using vast sums of public money. Police, armies and law and order are either defunded or weaponized for certain causes as pig-ignorant binary officials ignore history and fail to manage anything in a balanced way.

It is Bedlam on the streets now where the psychopaths roam freely throughout the public service, universities, courts, police, politics - all trust gone - "whatever it takes" (to get my way of certainty) is the debate of choice - weaponized with violence, personal attack and abuse. Women display their tits in parliament while breastfeeding to signal their special virtue and power and smug feminist activists smear themselves with menstrual blood and walk into restaurants demanding everyone look at them and do what they say for the "certain cause". The smug entitled narcissists - women and their demands for attention.

The male historical battles for hundreds of years involved the concepts of honour, consideration, mercy and fair play but that becomes more brutalized (now using psychology and maths/game "experts") by those that sought "certain victory" and the realization that - inhuman behaviour - all out banshee madness - killed more people - it was more "effective" - and gave more power to the tyrannical elites. It is just not cricket anymore. Heads are smashed by police - heads of those who dare to question are smashed, destroyed and wiped from history by brutal sentient human pigs while others tremble in fear or cheer on - feeding their own insane bias and hatred or sheer joy of bloodsport. Canberra Magistrates like Cook smash the heads of anyone who dare to question his smug narcissist elitism and the little boy and girl court/political/media/university officials laugh with mob like glee.

Lies are spewed forth daily by permanently entitled victim classes or power mad tyrants and the middle way or some vague flag of humanity dwindles into a soon to be destroyed history. Virtue filled idiots, binary thinkers, greedy narcissistic elites and haters dominate all the stages of the world.

There is no-one left to talk to.

Corruption is endorsed by political parties - the more corrupt you are the more opportunity comes your way. The world financial crisis and other historic world collapses are seen as a glitch, a few bad apples, a few corrupt and some token examples are wheeled out for public decimation. The elites double down on their corruption and lies. Davros, the evil character on Dr. Who, should visit Davos when the elites are in town. The truly corrupt, grimly (for all of us), hold on to us much corruption as they can and double down with more lies, games, manipulation, corruption, bribes, etc - anything but the truth. There are not enough trees left to build all the guillotines required.

Courts and politicians are "above the law" and are deluded to think that having corrupted the people and systems so much in the Justice departments, the public service, the police, the courts (isn't about time we had a women high court judge) with virtue causes (white ribbon, diversity, equality, aboriginal flag flying, feminism, extremism, groupthink, family court, tyrannical (Saving your life) laws, etc) that anything short of a major overhaul will stop the complete breakdown of "justice" across society. You have no idea, ignorant politicians Like Andrew Barr, Andrew Leigh, Alicia Payne and all the others who ignore me and snigger and enjoy their delusional, self-centered, corrupt and pig-ignorant abuse of the public offices they hold and the contempt with which they hold me and others who might dare to question their demonization and abuse - have no idea what is happening in the world or any idea of history. They would be gone from the tribe already. They are only in politics because of the fat, dumb, lazy complacency of illusionary "wealth" (and their corruption by siphoning off money and paying their supporters) - which has been turned into world wide indenture to financial elites - that the Grand Delusion of "Sustainability" is in the hands of the totally corrupt liars we see in all the States and Territories around the world surrounded by highly paid dim-wits, feminists, manipulators, bullshitters, spin doctors - who spend every moment of their corrupt and abusive lives building grander delusions and demonizing anyone who threatens their personal profit, corruption, virtue and pig-ignorant view of the world.

The breakdown across society goes unseen mostly. The feminists and other binary extremists lack cognitive ability and double down on binary certainty. Others barely notice or think it might just be a glitch in the matrix which will correct itself automatically. The ones who do notice sometimes think it is just one or two people - not a wide scale human problem. Others who see a bit further - are up against the soothsayers and binary certain profiteers who scout for people to join their church of binary certainty.

No-one answers the question "Why do you think convicting all men without a trial or being able to defend themselves is good idea". "Why do you think making permanent orders - which can never be revoked - against a man in court while he is not even there or aware of any charges a good idea?"

So it is not just pig-ignorant politicians Like Andrew Barr, Andrew Leigh, the Greens and Labour party women and weak minded men and the rest. It is everywhere - All of the media, All of the universities. All the schools, the women - it is everywhere.

The Argument Against Tyrants and Totalitarianism

To be totalitarian in a certain counter argument is problematic. Let us explore a bit.

Greeks loved Tyrants, Solon - Lifespan[-630 to -560] Born_Loc(Salamis, Greece) Rank(40)

Keyword(Philosophy, Law, Poetry) <https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Solon>

https://penelope.uchicago.edu/Thayer/e/roman/texts/plutarch/lives/solon*.html

https://penelope.uchicago.edu/Thayer/E/Roman/Texts/Diogenes_Laertius/Lives_of_the_Eminent_Philosophers/1/Solon*.html

was so admired, not only for his poetry and singing but philosophy and good sense (he attended the court of leaders of the day) that the city (Athens) that was in decay and moral decline invited him to be their tyrant to fix the problems. He modified Draco's laws https://www.worldhistory.org/Dracos_Law_Code/ and made them less Draconian - especially making the elites and the common man more "equal" under the law. He declined the invitation to be a Tyrant but helped in other ways by fostering debate and discussion throughout the region as he travelled. <https://www.worldhistory.org/solon/> Solon had traveled and traded and had seen some of the world in his early years. He explored life.

So the basic problem is this difference between the do nothing and do definitely something. The tyrant and Totalitarians are all based on the idea of constantly definitely doing something - constantly acting and increasing dogma. It becomes a habit. Filling their smug virtue and money bags. Saving the Planet, etc.

I explore this in my humanist frame 04 Humanism – Information Classification Frame, Version 1, date 10/02/2019 <https://humanistman.com/wp-content/uploads/2019/02/04-Humanism-%E2%80%93-Information-Classification-Frame.pdf> where I also introduced the issues about the null hypothesis test. (See Fisher)
 This ability to choose something other than binary (Flight/Fight/NULL) came to all life on Earth in more complex ways as Cooperation and MORE Choice options with the Eukaryote <https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Eukaryote> MORE THAN 350 million years ago.

		Live?
		Y	N
Choice Option1?	Y	TP A. Option 1 and live	FN B. Option 1 and die
	N	FP C. Not Option 1 and live	TN D. Not Option 1 and die

Tyrants and Binary certaintists (feminists, socialists, etc) do not tend to use a scientific method, explore hypothesis, test and examine results (or if they do it is highly biased and framed) - they tend to just wing things based how it feels to them or whether things make them “happy” or “rich” or fill their virtue cups on the way to utopia. Asking women to explain their thinking is considered abusive and misogynistic (asking women to think is a crime and a put down) - because all you need to know is their feelings and their outrage. Their frame of certainty - “Women are entitled victims”

How dare you question me - says the Australian Senate/Judges/Politicians, etc!

One way of explaining this type of thinking is the feminists. The best way to “solve” gender discrimination is to discriminate against men and towards women.

So this is the type of basic incoherence we are starting with when you try to talk to these people.

I have principles, integrity and values - i’m only a hypocrite sometimes - when it suits me. Psychopath. Delusion.

I asked one of my friends whether he supported the idea of removing people from society if they choose not to get a mandated vaccine. He said Yes - he did support it. I then explored his fears and justifications and tried to explain the difference between vaccination, infection and transmission. It got to the point where he insisted that vaccinated people are much less likely to get infected and used some “statistics” from memory to support his argument. I suggested that that did not seem likely to me as that is not the purpose of vaccines and I am unaware of any vaccine manufacturer or health professional body making that claim I invited him to send me more information and discuss further. Some emails later he doubled down and now refuses to talk or explore the issue any further - convinced that he is right and that I am a lunatic, bigot, denier and far-right extremist.

During the discussion at one point he said - well, you make the counter argument. I laughed and said no - it is up to you to make your claim.

This is the point that the Tyrant and Totalitarians (binary certain dogmatists) seem to fail to understand. The Null case.

Do nothing special is a valid choice.

Knowing when to do something and when not to, is a skill. The anxiety is always there but it does not always have to be acted on like a tantrum throwing child or hysterical women.

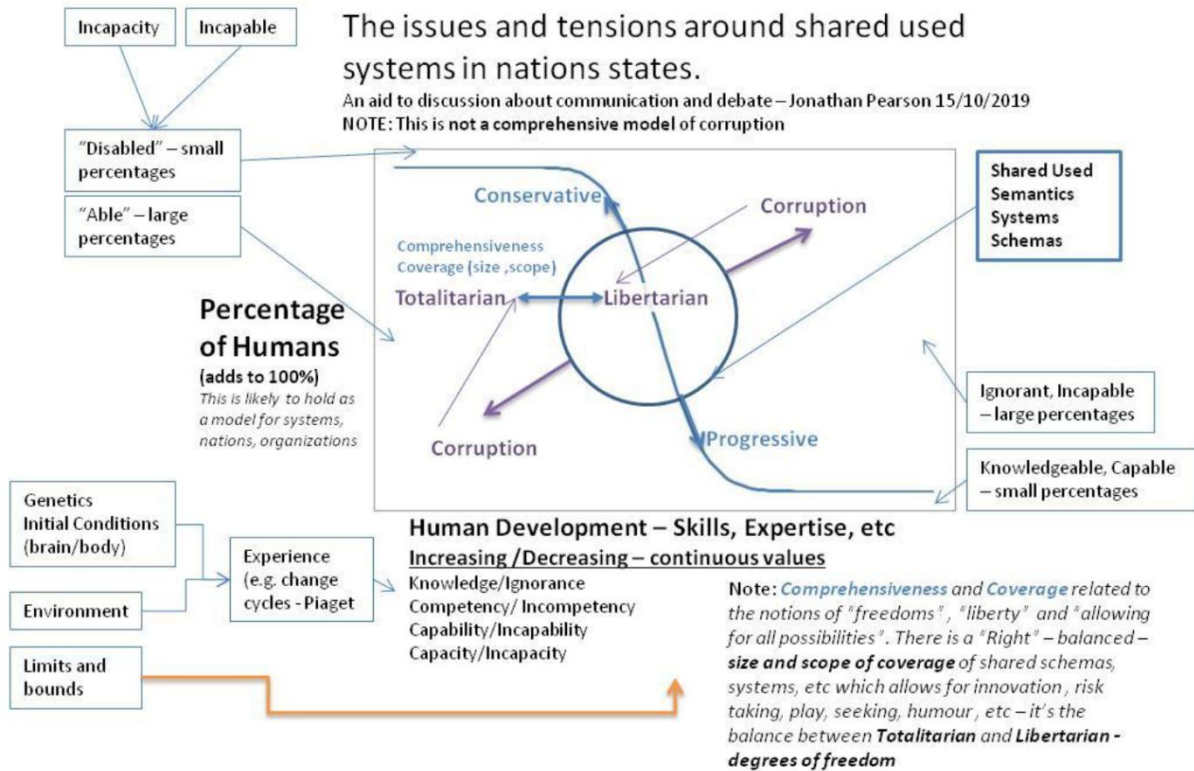

So making something other than the NULL case is complex and should be discussed.

This general insanity is widespread throughout society now - See Corruption – Binary Thinking – Prove You are Not A Criminal – A quick investigation into a standard technique of abuse by question and trial by media – very common in binary thinkers and idiots. <https://humanistman.com/wp-content/uploads/2020/07/Corruption-Binary-Thinking-Prove-You-are-Not-A-Criminal.pdf> - and operates as standard practice in Family Law and Domestic violence cases in Australia and also is run by the media all the time.

If he agrees with locking special people up then my hypothesis is that it requires a special argument - the hypothesis, fact, explanation, test and all the information related to that basic discussion. For example - in a tribe if we decide to move to find water then we must choose from infinite choices and make a case for the best choice before the tribe moves on. An alternative to that is "Trust me I am your tyrant" - and/or no discussion at all and kill anyone who deviates from the Tyrants chosen path

Tyrants seem to be deliberately thick as two planks - pig-ignorant and the least intelligent but most popular. Their popularity is not based on their capabilities and decision making - usually corruption and sycophancy. In today's human societies there are much fewer life threatening and critical choices at the nation level - so the feedback mechanism and removal of popular but incompetent leaders is much slower than if you were wandering a harsh environment as tribe trying to survive on a day to day basis. While we are descended from capable humans based on natural selection we are now faced with such complacent wealth and comfort (Fat, Dumb and Lazy) that pig-ignorance and lack of capability seems to be actively supported and rewarded.

So rather than argue for the binary opposite of Totalitarianism and Tyranny or say something like "become a certain humanist" I provide a more complex picture - first developed in Debate - Human Difficulties <https://humanistman.com/wp-content/uploads/2019/10/Debates-Human-Difficulties.pdf> (page 34)

Mandating Outrage

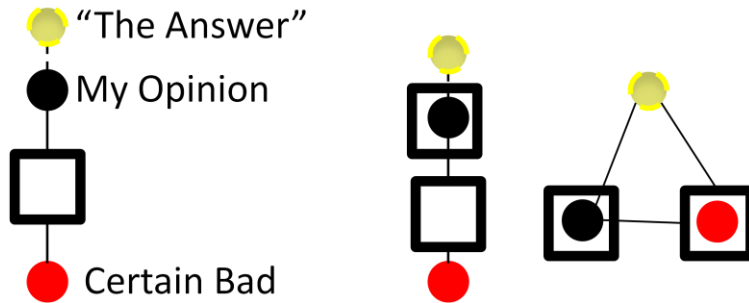

Once again the world wide inhumane delusional psychopathy is on display proving that these human problems are deep and across cultural and national boundaries. There are too few human commentators or analysts who can elucidate the issues for the pig ignorant and smug mobs - a vacuum of voices - a desert of ideas and exploration - just the same old memes of narcissism and instant judgement, outrage and mob violence. When Hannah Arendt wrote on the Banality of Evil - Train Diver to Auschwitz she experienced backlash from the mob. When Stanley Milgram pointed out the Obedience to Authority brutality https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Milgram_experiment his results were criticized - everyone looked for a way to ignore the blatant issues to pretend it was an aberration and worse still - that those people who dared to examine complex issues in detail (Galileo, Charles Darwin, etc) needed to be attacked and de-humanized by the mob - the smuglifunts - the bigots, binary thinkers, extremists, elites, corrupt, feminists (the permanent instant group outrage), women (on average - the permanent entitled victim) and weak minded men - sentient pets looking to be stroked by their masters.

People lack cognitive ability so they not only rush to judgement but as I explained in my previous articles - they seek to position themselves (Virtuously) and their in-group as above everyone else (the perpetrators) using the drama triangle in a binary certain way. - see the positioning and bias (sunk cost, confirmation bias) discussion here Corruption – Extremists

<https://humanistman.com/wp-content/uploads/2020/01/Corruption-Extremists-Feedback.pdf>, Corruption – Measurement and Implementation <https://humanistman.com/wp-content/uploads/2020/01/Corruption-Measurement-and-Implementation.pdf>), What Am I Missing <https://humanistman.com/wp-content/uploads/2021/09/What-Am-I-Missing.pdf> and What Am I Missing to 1300 Continued [Page: 8](https://humanistman.com/wp-content/uploads/2021/11/What-Am-I-

<div data-bbox=)

Missing-to-1300-continued.pdf and how we position and group ourselves into a natural drama triangle looking for heroes to save “us” from the certain “devil”.

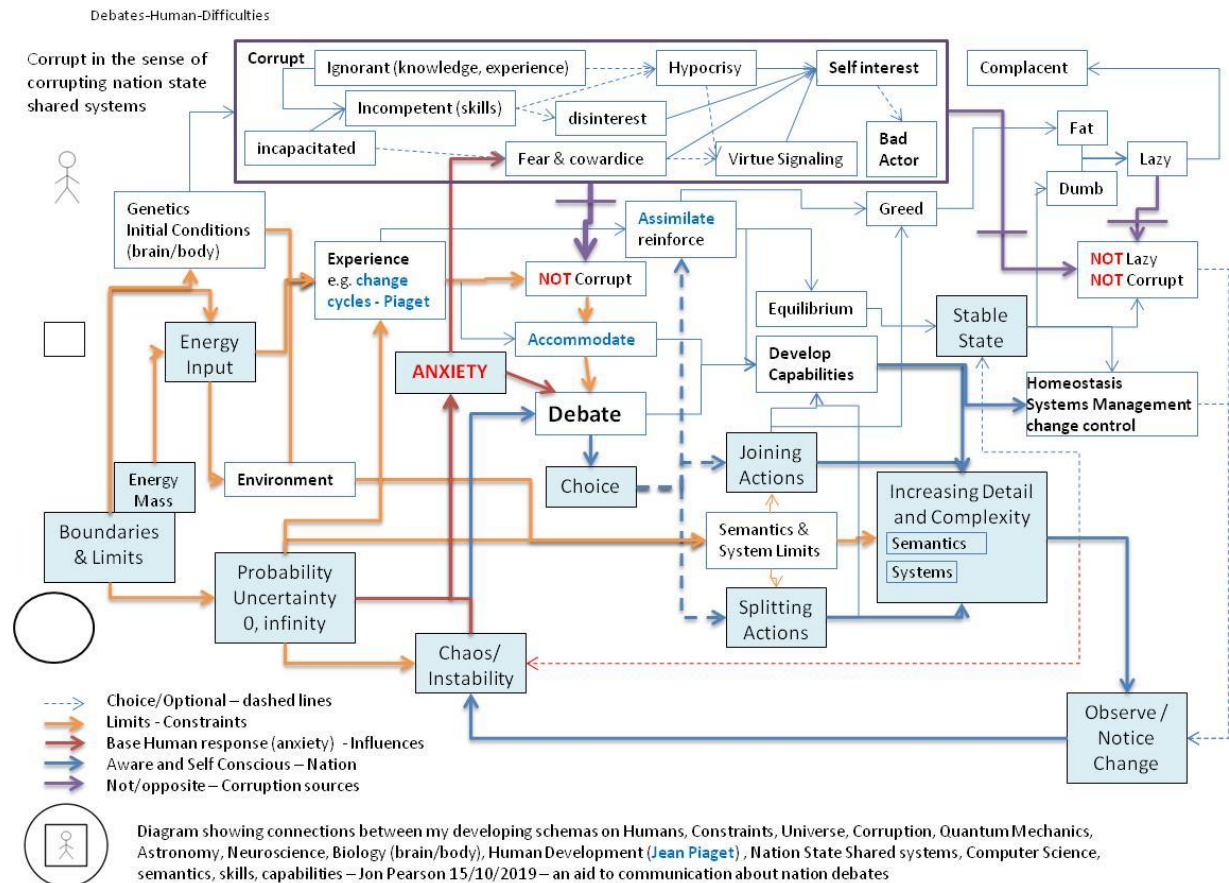

Any question

An Aside https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Stanley_Milgram Cyranoid

<https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Cyranoid> idea is very similar to the ability to look at actual drama - plays, poems, art, songs , etc to fire up the imagination and scenarios without actually committing to the action explored and described. This imagination/hypothesis seems an evolutionary advantageous and enjoyable part of our human development which allows multiple scenarios and group exploration without commitment of resources towards potentially fatal choices. One extreme of this development continuum is Fear and Anxiety. See a contextual exploration of the base human responses and other issues related to this here - Debates – Human Difficulties

<https://humanistman.com/wp-content/uploads/2019/10/Debates-Human-Difficulties.pdf> partially explored in this diagram

So it is with this context we examine the issue of Mandated Vaccines and providing proof of vaccination before you are allowed to do anything - like enter the country, go to a restaurant, eat food, socialize with others, leave your home, mandatory detention, Gulag, Re-education-camps, Get Treatment at a Hospital, travel freely (show us your papers (Germany/Nazis/Communists)), etc. A recent example of a tennis player coming to Melbourne is a good example to use because it demonstrates ingrained patterns of human behavior - especially a general widespread pig-ignorance and demonization of any exploration of ideas and questions. For More context see Corruption – Binary Thinking – Prove You are Not A Criminal <https://humanistman.com/wp-content/uploads/2020/07/Corruption-Binary-Thinking-Prove-You-are-Not-A-Criminal.pdf>.

Some Context

Many people cannot think. They just repeat slogans and go with the mob. This is why having a corrupt media like those controlled by the feminists and other binary extremists (ABC, SBS, etc) where the constant messaging of propaganda about special victim groups (blacks, women, etc) to get more money and attention - drive the quality of debate and open discussion down into constant identity politics, groupthink, mob violence and outrage (18C).

Everyone is trained to be constantly offended by someone. This constant bigotry is taught in schools as “respect” (for special designated victim groups) and repeated daily by the ABC and other media in a constant campaign to divide society. (The ABC refuse to publish my story or anything which does not support the “Women are victims” feminist narrative - Greens, Labour, courts, universities - all behave this way).

Worldwide this is known as “tribalism” and has been going on for thousands of years. “Remember the war” becomes a specific message about some wars or some events from highly biased viewpoints. No-one remembers “the problem of war” (all wars) or investigates the root causes of human issues - the Human Condition. Instead we have a culture of blaming certain groups based on identity. My war is “special”.

White men are blamed for everything and young boys and girls are taught this at schools.

Historically - tribalism is a world wide pattern in every human culture where demonizing, killing, stealing, etc from other groups has been part of a survival mechanism. We see the constant crime in Queensland, America and other places by black people (BLM) is based on the entitled/victim narrative and no consequences for special tribes (groupthink) - Blacks, Women, Elites, Premiers, Judges, etc.

Growing populations meant more tribal interactions and competition for resources and in the last 12,000 years trade and travel increased through Egypt, the Levant, Mesopotamia and then through Asia (the steppes) China and Europe. It took some thousands of years of development for humans to learn communication, cooperation, trust and justice concepts to support this kind of interaction. These things became more important (how you behaved) rather than which tribe you belonged to. There were always tribal elements present but tribal violence was found to be unsustainable and a restriction on human development in the long term. This does not stop short term, binary thinkers and delusional psychopaths (the “insane”, feminists, extremists and zealots) resorting to tribal violence and abuse (a pre Eukaryote evolutionary state).

Then the idea of “Nation” (trust, justice, sustainability) was developed to help tribes learn to cooperate and live together but this is always undermined by groupthink (religion, race, tribe, feminists, etc) who tend to resort to propaganda (sharing the delusions), abuse and violence. We see this with the ABC/SBS saying “coming to you from blackfella country” before each show and “this country belongs tribe X” - “always was and always be tribe X land” , flying “aboriginal flags” to “unite us” (delusional) and “First nations - to try to corrupt the language to say that a tribe IS the same thing as “Nation” using the entitled victim/outrage narrative. Nation is not taught now - Victim/Perpetrator is the main concept taught at schools, universities and portrayed by media and politicians.

Joy of life and humanity is destroyed as the certain causes of virtue are doggedly pursued.

Humour, Art, Joy of life (Singing and dancing) have been outlawed and controlled by the state and virtue signaling media ready to jump from a great height (Like the Australian Senate did to Bettina Arndt) and anyone who does not repeat the tribal slogans or dares to question.

Throughout history - some writers tried to explain - Chinese Philosophers, Thomas Hobbes, the Huxleys, Marcus Tullius Cicero, Friedrich Wilhelm Nietzsche, Aristotle, Arthur Schopenhauer, Bertrand Russell, Immanuel Kant, David Hume, Marcus Aurelius, Jean-Jacques Rousseau, John Stuart Mill, Francis Bacon, Thomas Paine, John Locke, Richard Burdon Haldane, Erich Fromm, etc.

Some tried to show the children because they can still learn and ask questions - like Aesop, Lyman Frank Baum, Jacob Ludwig Karl Grimm (The brothers Grimm), S.E. Schlosser, Hans Christian Anderson, Joel Chandler Harris, etc.

Some tried to warn of the dangers and show what would happen - Herbert Spencer, Albert Einstein, George Bernard Shaw, George Orwell, Fyodor Dostoevsky, Aleksandr Solzhenitsyn, etc

Some tried setting an example and demonstrating logic and reason - Socrates, Rene Descartes, Georg Wilhelm Friedrich Hegel, Euclid, Leonhard Euler, Johann Wolfgang von Goethe, Blaise Pascal, Isaac Newton, Charles Darwin, Captain James Cook, James Maxwell, etc

Some tried to Entertain, Amuse, inspire imagination and Poetically Repeat simple messages - Ovid, “Thalt Shalt Not”, Chrétien de Troyes, Geoffrey Chaucer, François Rabelais, Daniel Defoe, Jonathan Swift, William Shakespeare, H G Wells, etc.

Others kept carrying ALL THE MESSAGES forward in time - the librarians, historians, collectors

Slaves - an aside

Historically food and resources were scarce at times. Indentured servitude was common but slaves had choices and freedoms at various times - especially as the Greeks and Romans continued to explore humanity, although I imagine the Chinese may have also explored ideas of slavery https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Slavery_in_China. Soldiers could work hard, build roads and bridges and eventually settle in different places. While it was common to get slaves to do work - there was also the idea that a young boy or girl in a starving tribal family was more likely to live while working as a slave to Roman family than they were to starve to death in the hills. A “better” life (a choice faced by families throughout history). It is complicated and not a binary issue. What is employment or working as a flower girl in Covent Garden?

Roman slaves were freed at times and after “sufficient” time in service - many becoming philosophers and great men noted in history.

The Issues Explored

A recent example of the delusion is about Mandating vaccines for a virus and the government and community responses to this and the “pandemic”.

Firstly - it is important to remember that Vaccine Documents have existed in the past. But for the exactly the opposite reason as the pig-ignorant public servants and politicians are currently discussing and using them. The idea being that if you got a vaccine that it was registered in a stamped document which you used with your doctor to keep a record of which vaccines you had. This was used to help you protect yourself when you went to other countries. For example, if you travelled to a country which had a high incidence of rabies then you were advised to think about getting a Rabies vaccine to protect yourself. <https://immunisationhandbook.health.gov.au/vaccine-preventable-diseases/rabies-and-other-lyssaviruses> This you did by weighing up the risks with your doctor and the dangers and side effects of the vaccine with the risk of getting infected with the disease. This was personal health choice based on your own special circumstances.

Most people seem to either not understand this concept or are deliberately lying about it. I suspect that due to the appalling pig-ignorance and corruption (feminists, binary, zealots, etc) - it simply does not even register in people’s minds.

If you had visited a country with high infection rates of a disease which is not common in your home country - you might be asked if you have been vaccinated or have any symptoms when you return home.

The other idea is differentiating vaccine mandates at national and state levels. Incoherent principles and nonsense arguments based on parochial tyranny, hysteria (unbounded fear) and demonization of others.

Denying people entry based on vaccine status has now been made an international war against individual choice (Plurality) - we see Totalitarianism on a wide scale and how easily it becomes implemented, accepted and supported - not only by the Habsburgs tribes who have a long history of groupthinking and special elitism but also too - in other tribal countries with a history of individual choice and freedoms. The “Ends Justifies The Means” and “Whatever It Takes” and “No child shall live in Poverty”, “Climate Justice” becomes the certain cause slogans for the dim-witted binary thinkers who dominate the world at the moment. (Feminist, Black, Zealots, Binary extremists, women (On average) and weak minded men.

Personal virtue is paraded by presidents and premiers as they demonize and attack others personally by calling them liars, idiots and a danger to society.

People are cancelled from entering countries and states - not only on their choices of vaccines but on any perception of what the MOB MIGHT do. If someone comes in who is “not vaccinated’ then all of society becomes a “Victim” of their choice. We all got vaccinated and had tattoos say “Pig-ignorant Virtue” on our foreheads - so must you if you wish to enter our/state/country - we don’t tolerate difference here - we kill it. Bow down every day to our smug gods of certainty. Welcome to Smug Binary land.

Government ministers issue public statements claiming the fear of what might happen when the mob (which they invented out of thin air - it is always called the “far-right” mob - any group of individuals with different opinions is called a “far-right mob and any group of people chanting the same slogans (“kill all men” “lets burn this place down”, “Black Lives Matter” are called society and freedom fighters for causes of virtue) might react when an individual with “controversial” opinions is allowed to speak publicly. In China this is dealt with by summary execution, “disappearing” and constant video and police surveillance so the “Rightspeak” and “correctthink” is maintained for the CERTAIN GOOD of society. Controversy is a crime. Debate is defined as sedition and dangerous to the idea of “keeping the peace” - yet - as history has shown - it seems to be the “peaceful society” which is so full of it’s smug, comfortable (Complacency - Fat, Dumb and Lazy) view of the world that they can ramp up their groupthink and abuse like any power mad, psychotic tyrant - lest their lazy, tiny brains have to expend energy engaging with difficult topics. The Dogma of certainty grows with mandate rules, mandated laws, mandated punishments, mandated “good” - rightthink, correctspeak (Diversity, inclusion, equality, positive discrimination, “human Rights”, “Keeping you safe”, saving the planet, promoting women and blacks, etc)

Old Greeks and Roman men kept their brains active by working, debating, thinking and writing about history and the human condition.

Visas of entry into a state or country are denied to people who want to debate - but they are even denied to people who might spark internal debates - just by existing. They disappear like female tennis players in China who dare to suggest the Chinese elite are corrupt. How dare you question! They are wiped off maps and eliminated from history - there was no such country as Taiwan or Tibet and how dare you suggest there ever was! Comedians are not allowed into countries to make fun of the absurdities of the human condition. Law and order has been replaced by tyrants and smug vigilante mobs.

Eliminating corruption and maintaining law and order (justice, sustainability) in nations is not as important as virtue signaling or controlling the population. We like Mobs as long as they are “our” mob and we smash the heads of those who dare to question.

“I am afraid of the Mob” - shout the politicians as they display their weak, pig-ignorant, corruption and willingness to sell out to the highest bidder - while delusionally claiming to be “good” and “working for all” Australians for the benefit of the “Nation”. I anticipate (predicting the future) what might happen (I am exceptionally talented at modeling the certain future) - my future fears.

Money cannot be borrowed locally or internationally without strings of “morality” attached by banks and financiers around the world - all imposing their view of “certain good” and demonizing those who want to debate or disagree. NO MONEY FOR YOU - YOU BAD HUMAN!

Stay away from our country if you can think!

Principles require some structure, debate, discussion and exploration but slogans like “freedom of the Press” and “national Security” are the preferred methods of lies and abuse by pig-ignorant tyrants. Of course there are special/exceptional circumstances on the continuum but you better be prepared to have the debate and to be wrong lest you end up with no principles at all (hollow) lacking character and behaving like a Canberra Narcissistic, psychopathic, tyrannical judge of the world. Something between constant dogma/certain law/certain principles (always be “good”) - and special circumstances and exceptions.

Sunk cost means everyone doubles down of their smug, wonderful, safe, pig-ignorance.

Smug Superiority and Moral comparison - at least I am a good person.

Try this as a test “ I am so morally superior that I do not even need to try to be morally superior to you”

You will notice the general frame for activation in my Human Frame document 13 Humanism – Activation, Version 1, date 30/09/2019 <https://humanistman.com/wp-content/uploads/2019/09/13-Humanism-Activation.pdf>

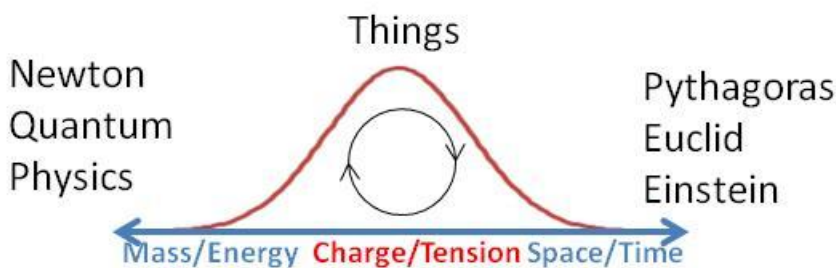

13 - Humanism - Activation

We see that the hypothetical universe manifests itself through “things” and our beginning logical frames of BOUNDS, NUMBER and IS and NOT. The “things” have basic characteristics which we understand as 2. Mass/Energy, 3. Dimensions/Space (including time), 4. Charge (tensions) and Information.

What I call charge and repulsion and attraction can also be called tension, electro-magnetism, potential energy, relative difference, Quantum entanglement/“Spooky” action at a distance <https://www.science.org/content/article/einstein-s-spooky-action-distance-spotted-objects-almost-big-enough-see> , Einstein’s relativity, Ricci equations, string theory, etc. This is all a round what we imagine as cycles of mass/energy interacting within what we consider as Space/Time(Distance) - the Spatial dimensions. This is my conjecture of a useful abstraction level for this discussion.

This can be visualized on a continuum.

Dimensions in space were first asserted as the right angle by Pythagoras - repeated 4 times to make the square (four right angles make a circle) and then Euclid repeated that process infinitely and Einstein tried to connect that with Mass/Energy to make Space/Time.

Newton gave us mass/gravity (attraction), Maxwell Attraction/Repulsion and many others tried to connect and discover everything together.

The middle of the continuum has many things in it which are less certain than the mass/energy extreme and the space/time/dimensions extreme. Probability, Monty Hall (probability and choice), interactions between magnetism/electricity, wave/particle duality https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Wave%E2%80%93particle_duality , quantum physics, observer effect https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Observer_effect_\(physics\)) , charge, choice, hypothesis, uncertainty, Zeeman effect https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Zeeaman_effect , etc. Many people explored this and still do.

Heisenberg's uncertainty principle (1925) https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Uncertainty_principle which limits the certainty that momentum (mass/energy) can be determined at the same time as position in space/time. The more certain you are of the mass of an object then the less certain you are of the position and vice versa.

Pauli exclusion principle (1925) https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Pauli_exclusion_principle expresses a similar idea (fermions/bosons) about simultaneously taking 4 quantum particle measurements.

This idea continues to develop and be understood in light of Niels Bohr's complementarity https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Complementarity_\(physics\)) idea, Max Plank's work and others to be a general uncertainty between things and trying to accurately measure two things simultaneously. This has deep scientific and philosophical implications which are still being explored. These ideas and the technology required to explore them, are less than 100 years old - so they are still very new to humanity.

In general - the middle of anything is complex and uncertain. The more you explore - the more you find to explore (within limits of certainty). (see infinitesimals and fractals).

The idea can be seen also in the Bose-Einstein Condensate (approaching absolute zero energy - i.e. absolute certainty) https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Bose-Einstein condensate and "quantum statistics" which expresses information as statistical probabilities through phase transitions.

At the human level it can be thought of as the idea of a person travelling somewhere. The human exists and moves through space and time but the hypothetical destination has many paths and probabilities "I am going somewhere" is a hypothesis and the journey is an exploration of probabilities and choices along the way. Another way of thinking about it might be whether one knows both who they are with some high level of certainty (whatever that may mean) and where they are at the same time with any degree of certainty. Being aware of yourself instead of being aware of your surroundings. The human idea of doubling down on certainty and confirmation bias is around this problem. We invest certainty in ourselves as we journey through chaos. Explorers do this very well - but more on that later.

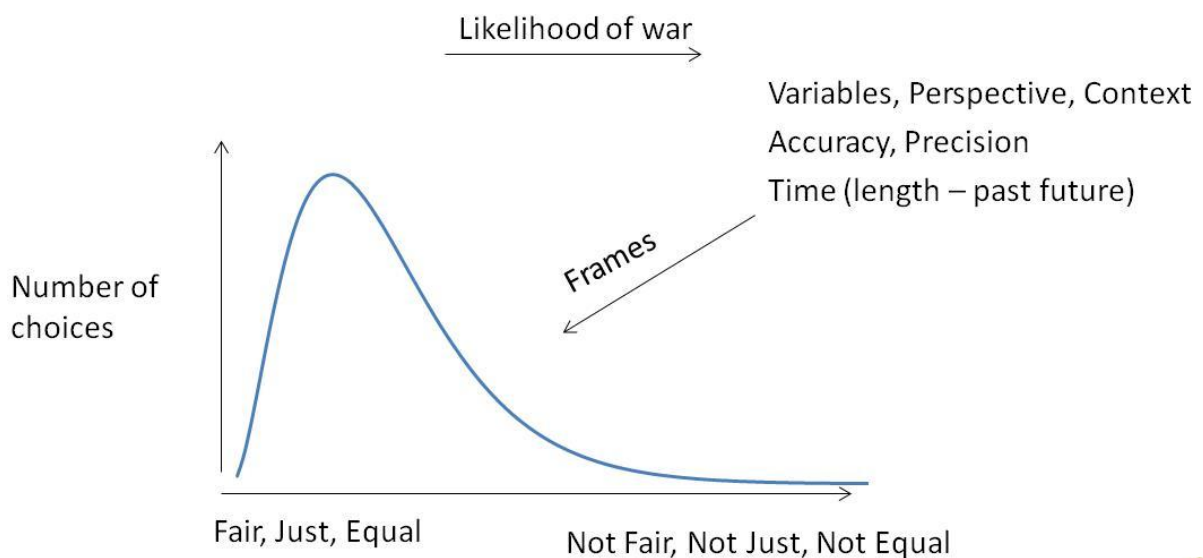

So this is the general nature of "things". (See my meta frames <https://humanistman.com/home/frames/meta-frames/>)

We then progress to being able to understand the relationships between information 6. Relationships (links) and are able to transform this information into our stored schemas (memory and books). We can also 7. OBSERVE - make active choices to choose to notice and make Observations about things. 8. Probability and 9. Measurement can then feed into our 10. Hypothesis/Choice/Options and decisions on 11. Acting.

It must be noted that there is a huge variability of human capability with observation, probability, measurement and hypothesis. All of these are exposed to high degrees of bias and other challenges (limits, horizons, focus, distraction, etc) - even if someone was authentically doing their best. In many ways - these abilities differentiate humans from other life forms and human development has been driven by people with a high degree of capability in these areas.

We try to keep things balanced away from Bad, towards fair, just and equal in a principled way and in Proportion see my Meta-Frame Proportion <https://humanistman.com/wp-content/uploads/2019/03/08-Humanism-Meta-Frames-Proportion.pdf>

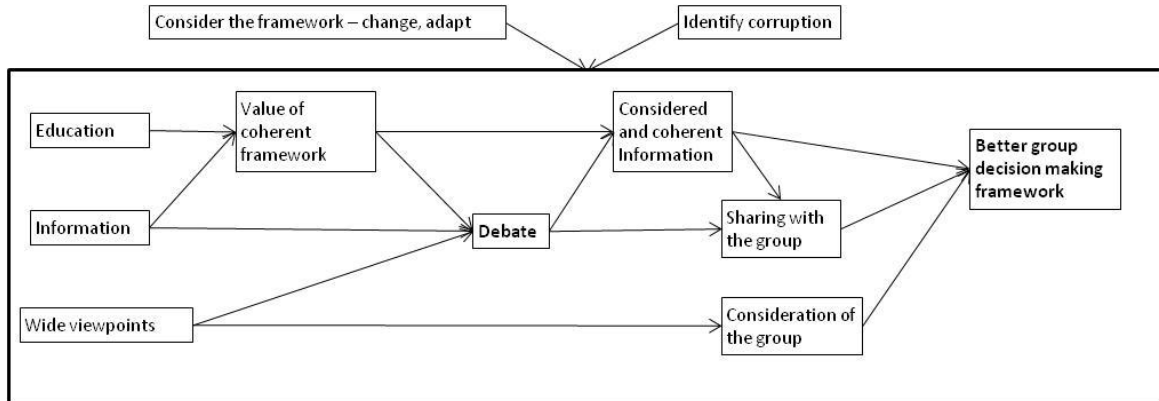

We build up schemas using the general “conceptual language” in the Activation Model above, highlighted in blue - as the general schematic framework. Humans make their own schemas and they can be different in focus and usage. Some will store their schemas mainly as Words and Sentences connecting Nouns and Verbs in a highly narrative form (lived experience) others might explore more on bounds and numbers or Precision and Accuracy or Hypothesis. So while there is general underlying frame work there is a high degree of human variability like any thing on continuums. Women tend to narrative memory and schemas based on impressions and feelings “I felt outraged” so their main focus is on “I, the Observer”. Men tend to explore and expand Bounds, Precision, and Hypothesis (experimentation) especially when young and usually spend less time on “I, The Observer” and more on 11. Acting and “what I observed” (self awareness) from the Act (everything else rather than themselves)

<https://humanistman.com/wp-content/uploads/2019/10/14-Humanism-%E2%80%93-Language-Development.pdf>

Individuals can use their personal schemas to make choices on behalf of the group they work for and these can be corrupted away from a shared group choice into individual's preferred schema.

See 12 Humanism – Corruption – Hypocrisy, Version 1, date 18/06/2019

You will see that Bias and Self Delusion are not something necessarily based on the ignorance, selfishness or narcissistic focus of the individual - they reside in the 1. Not for Self or Others Category - independent of main areas of corruption and more closely aligned with problems all humans face in our universe. Bias and Self-Delusion are part of the human condition - like a kind of certain “universal” in a Gottfried Wilhelm Leibniz quest <https://plato.stanford.edu/entries/leibniz/>. So even if you escape your programming and conditioning from your culture, upbringing and constant daily propaganda, you cannot escape the problems of Bias and Self-delusion.

We become more aware of Bias and Self-Delusion the more we develop as humans. Undeveloped humans (feminists, binary extremists, women on average and weak minded men) tend to ignore bias and self delusions even if they were made aware of it. They somehow FEEL smugly comfortably in their views no matter how unconnected to reality they are.

Corruption – Aligned With Group Telos

Note – Self Delusion and Bias exist outside the 1. Self Focused or 2. Self Positioning for others and in the 1. Not for Self or others

Bias and Self-Delusion cannot be totally avoided - it does not mean we should NOT be aware and seek to ameliorate problems caused by them. Human existence itself requires some comfortable delusions. I vaguely remember reading in Madness and Civilization: A History of Insanity in the Age of Reason by Michel Foucault a suggestion that maybe too much reality and truth and not enough delusion may cause the mind (and societal norms) to collapse. On a continuum - things may exist in extremes but it is about striking the right balance - in the middle somewhere.

In group situations things like shared perceptions and societal norms - our biases - seem important.

For example one of the societal norms here in Australia is the feminist campaign of “all women are victims”, “believe all women”, “All women must be believed”, “Promote all women”, demonize all men who disagree with this. This bias forms the backbone of legislation, courts, politicians, schools, universities, media and daily thought for the last 50 years at least. The fact that this results in a much higher level of abusive, lying, psychopathic women does not seem to bother the feminists, binary thinkers (other extremists) and weak minded men who dominate the Greens, Labour party, Courts, Legal profession, Police and most public service, government sponsored charities and government organizations in Australia. Many of these psychopathic abusers are promoted by media and governments the more extreme they are. They seem to encourage the abusive lies and psychopathy. Media (the mob), Police and courts have guns ready to shoot any man that a woman points at as she alleges her “truth” (the “lived experience”, “emotional intelligence”, etc). Self-righteous violence and abuse is stirred up and encouraged on a daily basis.

Studying History

What is the point of studying only a little bit of history? The first black women to take a Bus in America?

History is “FRAMED” - information is lost because of the “Windowing” https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Window_function (statistical framing) and framing around “certain” causes and ideas. (a certainty feedback loop (Sunk cost, Confirmation bias) - a real loss of information - other histories are lost from the record. It is not that the information is hidden https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/No-hiding_theorem, things become decoherent https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Quantum_decoherence and binary thinking certainists will seek to destroy “unsacred texts” and anything which not the current dogmatic certainty.

Statisticians will “cull” anomalies, “outliers” in the same way binary certainists will “cull” anything not suited to their frame of certainty. Feminists, Binary Extremists, Women (On average - think “Windowing”) and weak minded men do this all the time. Simplify everything to suit their biases.

The eccentricity of the astronomical observations like the “retrograde motion” https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Apparent_retrograde_motion of the orbit of Venus was culled from official dogma for hundreds of years until Galileo in 1610 observed many things in greater detail confirming that the earth was not the center of the universe and then others worked on models to support it’s existence. He was convicted of heresy and forced to recant on fear of death. Looking up and exploring time and space threatened the dogma - particularly the binary extremists (religion, etc) and also threatened their power and hold on “certainty”. In Aristotle’s time - philosophical discussions about the nature of the universe (See Archimedes the THE SAND-RECKONER <https://www.sacred-texts.com/cla/archim/sand/sandreck.htm>) were welcomed and debated for hundreds of years until religion and other forms of authoritarianism (certain dogma, totalitarianism) swept through the world and held on to determined pig ignorance, power, abuse, violence and corruption. Heretics were burned at the stake to entertain the binary extremist mobs and stoke fear in individuals.

Groupthink, mobthink, power, corruption and a disdain for Plurality all feeding back on itself until the high pitched chaos reigns supreme and all systems break down. Fiddles, Cakes and Avoidance - a retreat to caves of smug personal certainty as society burns around them.

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/S%C3%B8ren_Absalon_Larsen (*Søren Absalon Larsen (April 5, 1871 – January 2, 1957) was a Danish physicist who worked in the field of electroacoustics and is best known for giving his name to the Larsen effect)

Embarrassment - Awkwardness - Unsettled - Confusion

Real strong emotional connections are attached to many situations and they raise the human’s reaction level. “Things do not seem right”. Fear is deep at the base of this with Anger - flight/fight - but we have many more nuanced feelings. We have developed more nuanced responses. Jordan Peterson is noticing “Disgust” at the moment - and I consider that is a complex feeling and topic with many areas for investigation.

These many types of feelings seem to be around the group survival level and the ability to learn and develop. So - being aware and considerate - not dismissive - of other humans experiencing a variety emotions in some situations we might call empathy. Blame, Shame, Outrage - etc.

It is difficult to map the history of the development in nuanced emotional responses in human evolution. Things exist on a continuum so there will be some humans less developed than others. The history of the development of thought we can try to get from the historical records but emotional responses are far more difficult to explore - even with ourselves and our day to day human contacts.

But again, to put this in perspective - should I feel empathy for the poor narcissist, bullying A.C.T. magistrates seeming to have a mental breakdown while exercising full abuse and demonization of me in court? Should I “mother” them? Should I empathize with their violence and abuse - “forgive them father they know not what they do” (Luke 23:34)

Maybe I should try to help them with understanding the complexity of the human experience? But then - can psychopaths stop being psychopaths and abusive bullies? Are they stuck there for the rest of their abusive lives? Do they get to their safe bunker (in Queenstown NZ) when things start exploding and go “oops - maybe I was wrong in my certainty?” Two bullets to “reset” and start again?

Should children be sent to their room when having tantrums till they learn about behaviour and emotions? What to do?

This “unsettling thing” - is just that - an unidentified thing. It is neither good nor bad in a binary certain way. Some thing seems not “quite right” with either something I did, interacted with or noticed around me. I then seek to understand what this feeling is telling me. I Notice.

My exploration of these feelings is different to Women in Australia - who have been trained to see any feeling as fear/outrage and entitlement to justice. We saw this when Katy Gallagher (Labour Party woman) when her children caught a virus. Someone had to be to blame - she was the victim and went on national TV to declare her victim state as the Mother of sick children. Most Australian women do this constantly. Historically similar behaviour was called the “common scold”.

The ABC, schools, universities, Green and Labour party politicians do this - they spend their time planning on what words to use and who to blame for everything that goes on in the world. They constantly call out the certain devil and encourage mob violence and action in a binary certain drama triangle kind of way.

Women have become “loveless” (in a Thus Spake Zarathustra way) and determined to only be “entitled/victim”. There is nothing they (on average - like average wages, average number of politicians, etc) seem to enjoy about life (except power and abuse of others, the ability to lie without consequence) - only what they (on average) demand from others (in a narcissistic, self possessed entitled tantrum like way). Their only “hope” in life is to “kill all men” or demonize anyone they choose on a daily basis. Court, Police and politicians support this by puffing themselves up with virtue as certain “heroes”.

Most women (on average) in Australia are not required to learn much at all. Maths is not easily understood by women (on average - not just feminists) (older uneducated women running businesses simply ignore due process and do whatever they like - psychopaths, liars, etc (they do not aspire to develop “trust”)) and university degrees are handed to women for their ability to align with feminist groupthink and implement the certain “causes” prevalent amongst binary thinkers. The public service is biased against men and promotes women ahead of men in all departments (based on identity (black, women, disabled, migrant, lesbian, blah - nepotism) - Same for media, politics, universities, schools, etc. All based on identity, groupthink and corruption and not capability or talent. This is defined as “the cause” (of humanity) and - with 60% women occupying all jobs - “Success” - but there is “still more work to be done”.

So my motivation for exploration is the same feeling that all humans have - but feminists, binary extremists, women on average and weak minded men will turn this feeling into their confirmation bias and smug certainty of their “cause” (themselves and their beliefs, outrage/entitlement/anger). “oh I felt something - I must be outraged and offended” (18C). See Humanism Issue – Nation Law – Exceptions – Religion <https://humanistman.com/home/articles/>

As I wrote recently - You cannot argue with a volcano or a tsunami coming your way.

How dare you explode and kill me! How dare you wash away my life and smug certainty!

Chaos, Tension and Human Development

Others have observed the links between volcanic areas and human development. My hypothesis is that the shaking up of the human creature out of Smug, Fat, Dumb, Lazy complacent habitual behaviours (cycles) invokes development. These developments have become evolutionary and have taken humans to higher levels of exploration, science, innovation, etc than other creatures. The humans who remain are the ones which developed - not the ones which killed everything else (the killers of everything were overtaken 350 million years ago by the Eukaryote expansion <https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Eukaryote>). Charles Darwin did his best to explain this but binaries struggle to learn anything no matter how much effort intelligent and educated men put in.

The Rift valley, Mediterranean - constantly shaking your smug certainty - the certain patterns are interrupted and have to be dealt with. See my article <https://humanistman.com/home/articles/> of Volcanos and <https://humanistman.com/wp-content/uploads/2021/11/Volcanoes.pdf> <https://www.google.com/maps/d/viewer?mid=1EQARhWdft8mcjwglTvJPY0O6S2WNDJbj>

But we also can individually DEVELOP WITHIN OUR OWN LIFETIMES.

This seems to me - a major step forward.

The idea that volcanism may be one of the drivers of evolutionary development is not new - see the Galapagos Islands - which is one the most active volcanic places on the planet - <https://www.galapagosislands.com/blog/charles-darwins-galapagos-adventure/> which inspired Charles Darwin.

This is more nuanced than the idea of climate, the air we breathe, nutrients, metals, plate tectonics and competition as such. My hypothesis is that exposure to chaotic change within an individual's lifetime (earthquakes, tsunamis, eruptions) - inspire choice, change and learning - by adaptive mechanisms which strengthen and improve some evolutionary capabilities over others. We evolve and we are shaped. Groups can learn together and take advantage of those who are developing more.

Being Good is the Root of all Evil

09 Humanism – Bad and Good, Version 1, date 02/04/2019 <https://humanistman.com/wp-content/uploads/2019/04/09-Humanism-Bad-and-Good.pdf>

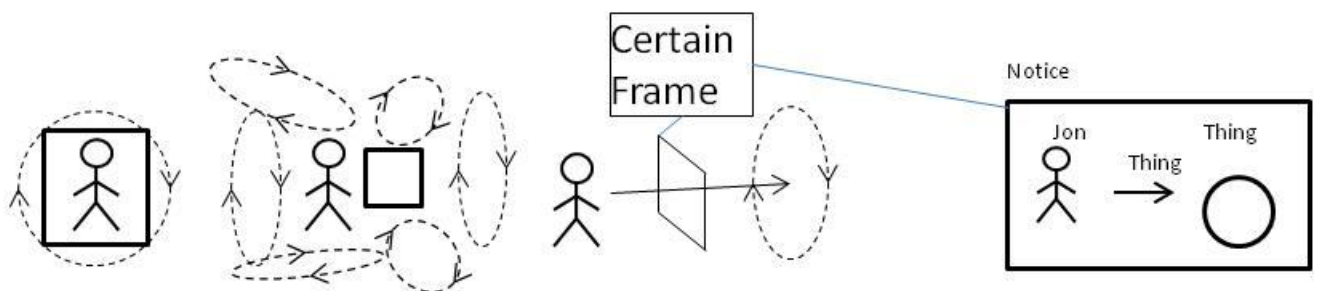

If only I did not have to delude myself that I am good I might be able to experience and enjoy being human. (Thus Spake)

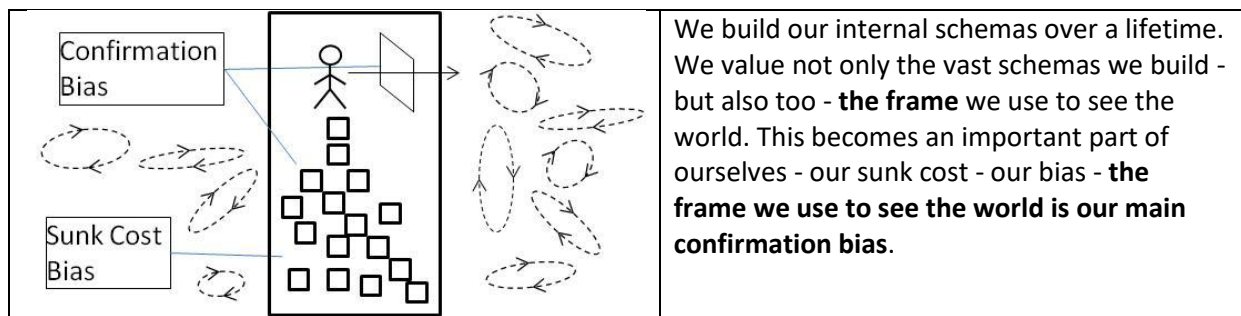

Framing the Universe at the Individual level

My meta frames <https://humanistman.com/home/frames/meta-frames/> describe some of my views on initial human development but I will explore further here and develop new diagrams to help understand the sunk-cost bias, confirmation bias type behaviours we manifest as delusions and psychopathy at one extreme and mental break-downs at the other. It must be noted this complete mental breakdown technique derives from psychology, was enhanced by the Nazis as “experiments” on the Jews at the time and has been advanced and developed by the United States (supported by John Howard and Alexander Downer) as “advanced interrogation techniques” https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Enhanced_interrogation_techniques where the aim is to completely destroy and break down an individual human and induce a complete mental breakdown so the individual will do or say whatever “certainty” the interrogator wants. In more “primitive” times physical damage and simple “fear” was the main weapon but since the late 1800’s this has developed into a whole new weapon of “psychological warfare” and has been taken on by feminists, communists, tyrannies and other binary extremists in their pursuit of power and control. Torture has been a feature of humanity for thousands of years.

For further context you can look at Madness and Civilization: A History of Insanity in the Age of Reason by Michel Foucault.

This initial position of noticing requires us to have some frame of certainty to use. In our case it is our bodies and senses. They exist - we as individual human bodies exist. Our initial certainty. We sense things using Eyes, Ears, Skin, etc - stored as memories. This constant interaction builds memories and schemas as described in my meta-models, Similar concepts have existed for thousands of years <https://plato.stanford.edu/entries/schema/>. We can use our frame to focus on things in the universe around us. Representations of the “truth” are retained as schemas, narratives, images, sounds, smells and other forms in memory.

It is deeply upsetting to humans to have any part of their world challenged. Many become violent, abusive, seek to blame someone (especially in binary extremists, feminists and women (on average)). Threatening someone's dogma is the most "offensive" (18C) thing a human can feel - their world is not as it seems.

Human mental breakdowns of various types can be attributed in part to a rapid overwhelming realization of "reality" - the sudden realization of the expanse of the universe and the part you have played in it, the potential destruction of all internal schemas and frames and a complete loss of any way to deal with the world. So coming to grips with techniques to explore the wider universe - including yourself and your own history - takes some effort and is best done gradually rather than all at once - building skills and experience over time. Mentoring, learning and improving. Being kind/considerate to old selves, learning, adjusting and exploring new and better selves.

I suspect many have succumbed to mental breakdowns by seeing too much and being in a constant state of being overwhelmed. Experiences of war and chaos does that to many people and some can cope better than others. Friedrich Wilhelm Nietzsche, Mervyn Peake, Spike Milligan and Kurt Vonnegut come to mind.

Being human.

Choosing different frames and exploring universes requires special attention and commitment and we see this in scientists, philosophers and explorers. Columbus and the egg story https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Egg_of_Columbus is not so much about how to do something it is more like that people who don't explore anything or spend most of their live cocooned and coddled in their smug certainty (usually living off the backs of the hard work of the explorers) - have little understanding of the effort and challenges involved in real exploration. When Captain James Cook sailed all over the world - he not only had to grapple the huge unknown - but also rogue waves, storms, food, logistics, being a leader to his crew, science, astronomy, ship building, diplomacy, weapons, mapping, recording, observing (the transit of venus, botany, wildlife, etc), detailed logs and records, history, trade, negotiation, etc.

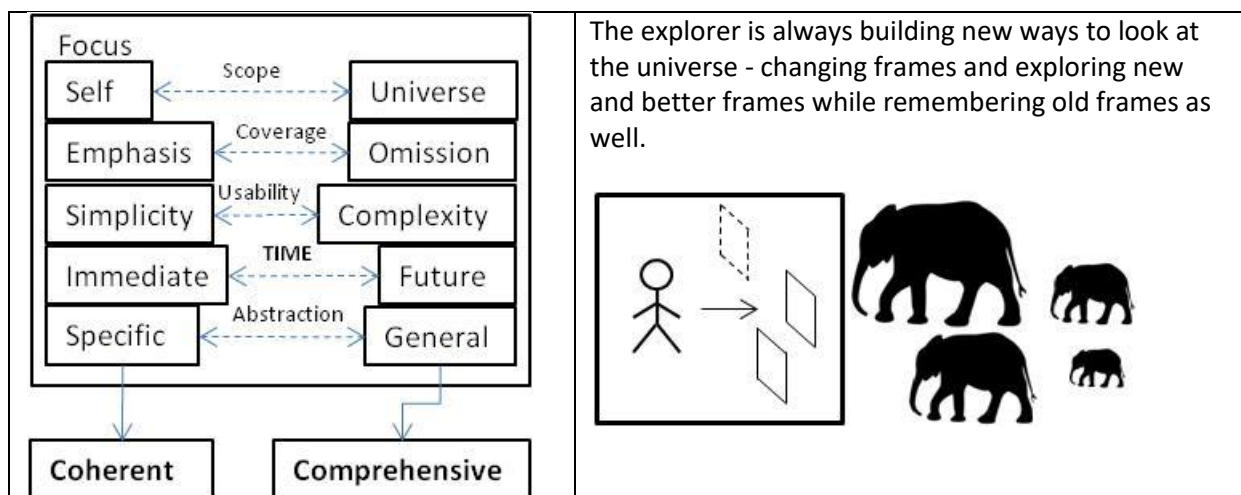

In Australia recently Captain James Cook's statue is being attacked by pig-ignorant smart arses (smuglifunts) who do not understand what it is to be a human explorer. Smug, know-nothing, entitled/victim abusers and destroyers of humanity who know nothing about life, history or the world at large and never will (entitled university students and "professors"). The statue is a reminder of the story of the man - the story of an explorer - a reminder to examine and learn - an invitation to examine, discuss and critically learn - not an invitation to smug binary extremists to rally the mob and destroy. (Think the ABC and their support of "Kill all men" and "let's burn this place down" type narratives)

An explorer chooses to question. He takes on the Quest. See Leonhard Rauwolf - Lifespan[1535 to 1596] Born_Loc(Augsburg) Rank(70) Keyword(History, Botany, Explorer)
https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Leonhard_Rauwolf <https://archive.org/details/acollectioncuri00goog>
<https://quod.lib.umich.edu/e/eebo/A58159.0001.001?view=toc> . Leonhard explores Iraq/Irak in a voyage down the Euphrates river (and other countries as well) - writing about everything he sees. This was not a “safe” journey and he disguises himself as a trader because of the greater danger to his life if they suspected he was a European (and not one of “them”). He is keen to learn and understand everything he sees and seeks to learn as much as he can from the people he meets and travels with.

Explorers understand things. The Confirmation bias and sunk cost bias are understood and allowed for (not ignored and doubled down on).

The frames for noticing are changed and develop over time. See my Focus model as an example.

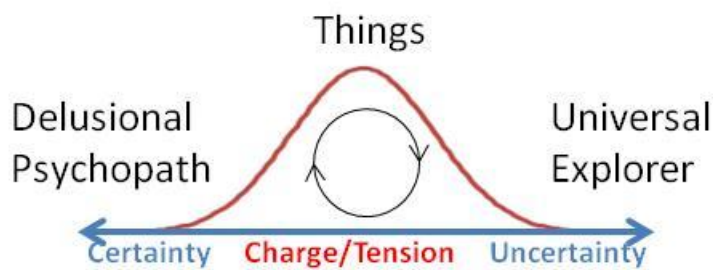

Corruption – Extremists. <https://humanistman.com/wp-content/uploads/2020/01/Corruption-Extremists-Feedback.pdf> I explore many of the human biases and try to find ways to understand and overcome them by using different frames. The focus model is one of them.

While this framed view of the world has echoes with Plotinus and his followers
<https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Plotinus> Plotinus had an inherent distrust of materiality (an attitude common to Platonism), holding to the view that phenomena were a poor image or mimicry (mimesis) of something "higher and intelligible" (VI.I) which was the "truer part of genuine Being". - it is not associated with “genuine being” but more to do with simply taking in the information around us and trying to make sense of it. A value statement on “higher” or “better” is irrelevant. Being able to see the elephants coming by using multiple frames gives an evolutionary advantage. Plotinus seems to have understood many things - here he explains the binary at least - the lack of balance but misses more specifics on complexity. "Once you have uttered 'The Good,' add no further thought: by any addition, and in proportion to that addition, you introduce a deficiency."
<https://www.gutenberg.org/ebooks/author/33956> (The “deficiency” in this context is probably meant to encourage the focus in the object being noticed and described rather than the rabbit hole of infinite distractions)

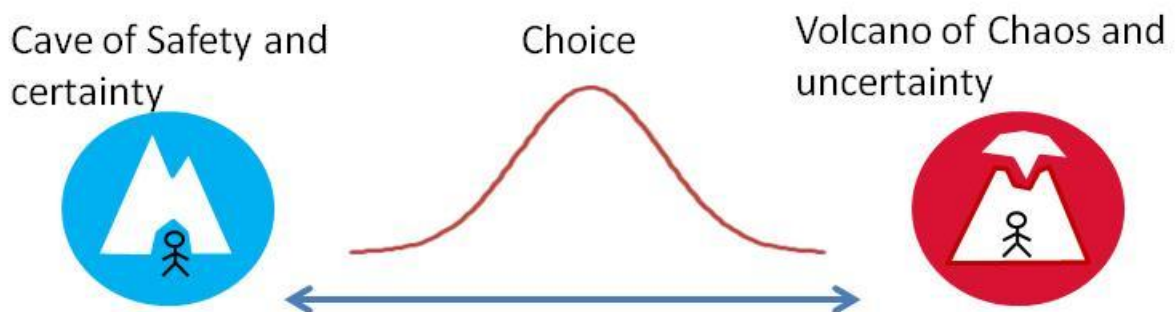

Plotinus delves into certainty with the “the one” and certain knowledge with “nous” and explores “happiness” as a value measure (as many European philosophers did much later). Am I happy when you stop treating me in-humane-ly or when you stop trying to cancel or kill me?

	The explorer rests from time to time but will continue to explore - frames change, schemas change and grow. This need for certainty ventures into delusion when it becomes the sacred text. The human is no longer able to discern reality as it is. The world has moved on and changed but the smug delusional psychopath is stuck in their Hindu like “soma”. The Vedas and their hymns and chants provide comfort to the anxious humans. Abstract: The importance of large impact events for the evolution of all bodies in the Solar System has been recognised by a large proportion of the geological community only in the past 15 years. More than 150 impact structures are now known on the Earth's surface. The origin of the Vredefort dome, a ca 70 kilometre wide structural uplift terrane in the centre of the economically important Witwatersrand basin, by either endogenic or impact processes, has long been controversial. Detailed microdeformation studies have recently proven that the dome represents the central uplift of one of the largest (original diameter: ca 300 kilometres) and oldest (2023 ± 4 Ma) known terrestrial impact structures. The Vredefort structure is not only of importance because of its controversial origin and particular setting in the centre of the economically important Witwatersrand basin. This structure is also the type locality for pseudotachylitic breccia and well-known for its abundant shatter cones and the enigmatic Vredefort granophyre. A wealth of new data on the Vredefort structure have become available in recent years: detailed microdeformation studies have revealed the presence of bona fide shock metamorphic effects in quartz and zircon; U • Pb dating of single zircons from pseudotachylitic breccia have provided reliable age information regarding the time of impact and have permitted temporal separation of the Vredefort impact event from the emplacement of the 2050 Ma Bushveld complex. This achievement has major implications for the understanding of the impact-related thermal and hydrothermal effects in the Witwatersrand basin as a whole and the regional metamorphic evolution. As continued study of the Vredefort structure has the potential to contribute much more to the understanding of large impact cratering events and their potential geological and economic effects, besides contributing to the general geological knowledge of the evolution of the Kaapvaal craton, this paper reviews the current knowledge on the Vredefort structure and to emphasise those areas in need of future investigation.

Mirages, Mermaids, Drugs and Delusions

Mirage <https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Mirage> is when the light bends in air as you walk across the desert looking for water and you see the shimmering effect in the distance. It must be water, you say, as you are so desperately hot and thirsty. You are framed by your feelings of thirst. You walk for miles and miles and the water never appears. It is an illusion - your senses have been fooled. You die of thirst. The wise ones you travel with will warn you not to pursue the mirage - it is not certain life giving water - it is certain death.

"I have all the things you seek - all your wishes will be granted - happily ever after" - the Jinn/djinn/genie in the bottle https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/The_Fisherman_and_the_Jinni <https://www.gutenberg.org/files/20916/20916-h/20916-h.htm#illus05> refused the will of Soloman - stood up to tyrant but the story is much more complicated than simply granting the fisherman's three wishes. Trust, Greed, Play, Trickery, Magic and many other things are explored.

The god of certain, permanent, everlasting "Good" shimmers in the desert.

Our senses are fooled in many ways - not just our eyes - what we see but also what we hear, feel and think. Between our perception and reality there is some kind of workable (Mill's utility) path.

Sometimes the delusion is a warning - if you follow too many delusions then this shows a desperate need to believe in fantasy and the avoidance of reality. You recognize your delusion and your habitual delusions and try to overcome them. I must try to face reality. I must overcome my habit of looking for delusions (false gods of "certain" truth/safety/answer).

Drugs like Laudenum, Opium <https://www.historic-uk.com/HistoryUK/HistoryofBritain/Opium-in-Victorian-Britain/> , Bex Powders https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Bex_\(compound_analgesic\)) and now a whole wave of new and addictive profit making life destroying drugs flood much of the world now. Political leaders signal virtue and attempt to buy votes by legalizing many drugs now. The human desire to avoid the reality of life is very strong (for some reason) and many people spend their whole lives in a drug filled deluded state. It seems to be highly addictive - not the drug - but the deluded state of mind.

The Mermaid - half woman/half fish - dates back to -3000 <https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Ashkelon> and the story of luring sailors on to the rocks - being "enchanted" and ignoring danger - has been around for thousands of years. The Goddess <https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Atargatis> Atargatis/Derketo <http://www.hellenicaworld.com/Greece/Mythology/en/Atargatis.html> "As Ataratha she may be recognized by the characteristic self-mutilation of her votaries, recorded in a passage from the Book of the Laws of the Countries, one of the oldest works of Syriac prose, an early 3rd century product of the school of Bar Daisan (Bardesanes): "In Syria and in Urhâi [Edessa] the men used to castrate themselves in honor of Taratha. But when King Abgar became a believer, he commanded that anyone who emasculated himself should have a hand cut off. And from that day to the present no one in Urhâi emasculates himself anymore." —Chapter 45."

Men cutting their own testicles off in praise of a certain god seems a little deluded to me. Maybe the devout and pharisees could explain it with their "logic".

Yet Eunuchs were "a thing" in Sumer <https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Eunuch> thousands of years ago and it continues (emasculaton, sacrifice for certain gods (feminism)) within cults and societies all over the world throughout history. Labour and the Greens are supported by emasculated Eunuchs (weak minded men, sentient pets).

Hans Christian Anderson's tale

https://andersen.sdu.dk/vaerk/hersholt/TheEmperorsNewClothes_e.html The Emperor's New Clothes - all the people in the town believing the obvious lie - that clothes exists where there is nothing. Only the boy calls out the obvious delusion but the emperor and the others all double down on their delusion in a determined pig-ignorant (George Orwell - Animal Farm) kind of way.

Now this kind delusion is not to be confused with aspiration and ideals - wishes and hopes - https://www.ted.com/talks/hannah_ajala_how_to_be_positively_delusional - which represent a goal or target which is imagined - a kind of positive direction or aim. With these kinds of things the idea is not certain - the certainty has not been answered - the questions/hypothesis - and the journey/quest towards the "certain" answer (if there is one) - still remain active, it is not certain belief.

Delusion is where you have been misled - the thing you believe to exist and pontificate to all those around you - this thing has no relation to any form of reality. Like tripping over a rock and denying the existence of the rock and blaming someone else (alleging that domestic violence is all one-sided, women never lie), or insisting that a ghost knocked over the tree, or pretending that volcanoes do not really exist - they are a figment of your imagination and even if they did exist - sacrificing chickens at the temple will save you. Delusions build ever further on each other until there is whole "tissue of lies and delusion" - the "fabric of society" starts to collapse under the weight of all the lies.

I personally don't mind if someone has a delusional belief in pink fairies but when their delusion involves violence and power over me - like "kill all men" or "Jon is the devil" - "Vaccines will save all of humanity" - then their delusion can affect the group (mob behaviour, herd instincts) and lead to danger to myself and others.

Self belief - confidence is not the same as delusion - we need to have some confidence in ourselves and our abilities - just to live with the idea of a volcano like Mount Etna on our doorstep.

So once again we see the continuum which ranges from fully deluded to full reality or "truth". Somewhere in the middle then.

But a little context on "truth" or reality - obviously to a mother raising babies the reality of the world is the baby - the constant demands of babies and children is all the reality a mother raising a child needs. Time to notice volcanoes and elephants is rather limited. So this is not about being Fat, Dumb, Lazy or complacent - it is about the FOCUS - and opportunity - what people are focused on and when - what stage in their lives. Children need to learn and experience - not be dogmatized. Young people meet and engage with each other to produce families. Old men (writers) seem to have quite wide focus and are looking around for things. Women now - even writers - are mainly focused on the feminist victim narrative. Hannah Arendt was a notable exception but she was exposed to male philosophers and male discussions. Most women (on average) tend to talk amongst themselves on a constant feedback loop.

Very few women writers are able to focus on anything other than themselves and their group identity. Exploring the human condition is a task lending itself to open exploration rather than dogmatic certainty.

The passive aggressive delusion is not a paranoid psychosis but very similar. This is when women regularly say "promise you won't get angry, promise you won't hit me" to their male partners. This is designed to habitualize the idea that men are, by default, violent and need to be specially reminded in schools, universities, with signs in toilets, Shaving Advertisements, on the ABC and in the white ribbon campaign pledge in courts, police stations and all the public service. This ensures the delusions of groupthink and division and the feminist victim narrative. "I was afraid he would hit me when he found out I stole all the money, killed the child and burned the house down - that's why I shot him - so he couldn't hit me (again)". The constant deluded state of women as mandated by the government and re-enforced every day of everyone's lives.

Framing

Feminists, Binary extremists, Women (on average) and weak minded men will tend to try to frame you. They want their frame of certainty to be your frame of certainty. This is where you use the expression of the double negative - not, not - neti, neti. Not your frame of certainty and not my frame of certainty.

See Gender – weak minded men get trapped in the binary certainty and incoherence of feminists.

Human development takes some work to escape the womb <https://humanistman.com/wp-content/uploads/2021/06/Gender.pdf> "See Francis Bacon

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Idola_specus The false idols - "gods" - Aphorism LIII ..." The idola specus are prejudices, by which individuals inappropriately extend norms or tenets that derive his or her own culture and social group, or to his or her own preferences. Racism, sexism and, more generally just "biases" are examples of idola specus, but the concept goes beyond them to the criticism of all forms of irreflexive subjectivity or individual predisposition. The term is one of four such "idols" which represent "idols and false notions which are now in possession of the human understanding, and have taken deep root therein, not only so beset men's minds that truth can hardly find entrance, but even after entrance is obtained, they will again in the very instauration of the sciences meet and trouble us, unless men being forewarned of the danger fortify themselves as far as may be against their assaults".[2] Besides idola specus, there are also idola tribus (Idols of the Tribe, caused by human nature), idola fori, (Idols of the Market Place, caused by language) and idola theatri (Idols of the Theatre, which are caused by the influence of philosophers)."

Also See Debates - Human Difficulties <https://humanistman.com/wp-content/uploads/2019/10/Debates-Human-Difficulties.pdf>

There is a problem with framing the frames. It too can become dogmatically certain and hierarchical - "The higher Good" - the "Higher Purpose".

The search for this "highest" thing is to do with binary thinkers stuck in hierarchical thinking while looking for certainty in the continuum. Positioning themselves against "others" on some internal measurement frame of certainty. (Looking down on people - "I have a big house - so there!").

Unhappy (anxious - uncertainty, complexity) with initial self-reference and recursions they must find a permanent point of certainty - which they call certain good. (God). For example the god of certainty is currently Women are Entitled/Victims and blacks are special.

This meta - framing technique (framing others to your beliefs) goes something like this.

“You don’t know what certain good is so I will tell you what it is. Certain good is saving the planet, certain good is sustainability, certain good is saving the Koalas, certain good is giving women more money, certain good diversity and inclusion, etc - now get down on your knees, wash my feet, give me your money, feel ashamed that you did not know what certain good was and that you needed me to tell you”.

The Tyrant/Dictator is usually full of personal virtue and goodness - they do have not principles that can they discuss with others about life or complexities - they can stay silent and avoid (omission) any issues which they personally will not gain virtue from. Their personal judgement is constant - they are “unprincipled” and they rush to insert their opinion - as they feel like it - rather than examine anything in a principled or analytical way. (at least I am good with Dogs and Koalas - as they stand by and watch Jews/Blacks/White/Men - being demonized and killed by the tribal mobs - their personal virtue saves them from having to explore, understand, discuss or feel guilt or responsibility (avoidance))

The Greens, Labour, feminists, binary extremists, women (on average) fly this “flag of certain good” - “I am morally superior” (positioning game) - usually based on pig-ignorance and a passive aggressive abuse (mob like) of “others” - groupthink. Women are trained to do this (respect, 18c, office of women, entitled/victim, etc) Weak-minded men (binaries) do this in the “Hero” mode of the drama triangle.

How dare you call me ignorant and biased - my flag of certain Good is “right” you heathen! Mob attack!

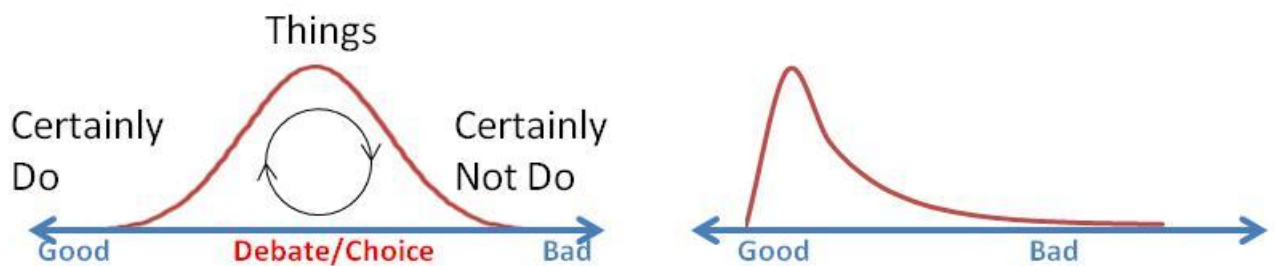

I also explored this in one of my Humanism Frames 09 Humanism – Bad and Good, Version 1, date 02/04/2019 <https://humanistman.com/wp-content/uploads/2019/04/09-Humanism-Bad-and-Good.pdf> where I explained that Bad seems much easier to define than Good.

If Bad is death then what is the opposite? Neti, neti?

To some extent the search for Good is not so much an exploration but a desire for certainty and escape from chaos (uncertainty, complexity).

But another approach would be to avoid certain bad which seems a little easier somehow - at least we can discuss it. Is it a bad idea to promote women ahead of men just because they are women? I can more certainly say yes to this. But man hating feminists, women (on average), corrupt, virtue signalers and pig-ignorant weak minded men have difficulty even having this discussion. They are deluded.

Somewhere in the middle then?

Men seem to be easily framed by women - see the white ribbon campaign and the respect propaganda campaign. It seems to be based on a constant demonization and passive aggressive approach of putting men down all the time and trying to make them feel guilty as if men are RESPONSIBLE for all wrongs in the world. Women seem never to be RESPONSIBLE or ACCOUNTABLE for anything - somehow they just don't seem to make it to full adult human responsibility (on average). If men do some wrong it is evil if women do the same thing they are mentally ill and must be forgiven - they were "victims" of mental illness - usually because a man made them mentally ill (this is a story pushed by the feminist Julia Baird of the ABC about women in jail). This seems to be re-enforced with the Drama triangle - women are victims - men are heroes/perpetrators (when they save women and kill men).

The weak minded become easily framed.

So you think hitting women is a good idea? Not,Not So you think climate change is not real? Not, not So you think that saving Koalas is wrong? Not,not So you think promoting Women is wrong? Not, Not So you think Blacks are not victims? Not,Not
So you think you are special and more entitled than Women, Blacks, Jews, Gays, trans, etc? not, not So you think we should not try to save the planet? Not, not So you think burning coal is good? Not, not So you think burning coal is bad? Not,not

It is tempting to try to fill your VIRTUE CUP - the Holy Grail - (of certain goodness) of saying CERTAINLY YES to any selection of statements that make up your binary certain constructed schemas.

Finding an anchoring point for belief. The Human Condition.

There is deliberate game I played with myself to overcome this framing technique which takes everything away from this framing problem and allows a much wider exploration. It becomes an anchoring point to help overcome the initial self-reference and recursion problem. My advanced technique for this I have documented in my articles as “One Thing I Know”

<https://humanistman.com/wp-content/uploads/2019/12/One-Thing-I-Know.pdf> .

Many years ago I was troubled with this general problem and I developed several techniques to help reduce anxiety - especially for the 10 years I was going through family court/CSA processes. The First technique is one used by the Greeks - the facing the fear technique. In this technique you name a thing (Fear and Dread) - the Greeks called these gods (Phobos and Deimos) - I just called them “things” - they have some certainty and shape to them.

What was I afraid of? Now you have heard the saying “The one thing to fear is fear itself”

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/First_inauguration_of_Franklin_D._Roosevelt#Inaugural_address “So, first of all, let me assert my firm belief that the only thing we have to fear is...fear itself — nameless, unreasoning, unjustified terror which paralyzes needed efforts to convert retreat into advance. In every dark hour of our national life, a leadership of frankness and of vigor has met with that understanding and support of the people themselves which is essential to victory. And I am convinced that you will again give that support to leadership in these critical days.”

He writes an Essay on fear https://oll.libertyfund.org/title/montaigne-essays-of-montaigne-vol-1#lf0963-01_head_022 “OF FEAR “I was amazed, my hair stood on end, and my voice stuck in my jaws.” I AM not so good a naturalist (as they call it) as to discern by what secret springs fear has its motion in us; but, be this as it may, ’tis a strange passion, and such a one that the physicians say there is no other whatever that sooner dethrones our judgment from its proper seat; which is so true, that I myself have seen very many become frantic through fear; and, even in those of the best settled temper it is most certain that it begets a terrible astonishment and confusion during the fit. The thing in the world I am most afraid of is fear, that passion alone, in the trouble of it, exceeding all other accidents. What affliction could be greater or more just than that of Pompey’s friends, who, in his ship, were spectators of that horrible murder? Yet so it was, that the fear of the Egyptian vessels they saw coming to board them, possessed them with so great alarm that it is observed they thought of nothing but calling upon the mariners to make haste, and by force of oars to escape away, till being arrived at Tyre, and delivered from fear, they had leisure to turn their thoughts to the loss of their captain, and to give vent to those tears and lamentations that the other more potent passion had till then suspended:—“Then fear drives out all intelligence from my mind.”

So my trick was to firstly name this thing - “Fear” - as many others had done before me. Then I set about working out what ideas I was attaching to this thing called “FEAR” - these feelings - what were they about? What was I afraid of?

We are all going to die - that was a given.

So I named all my fears - pulling them out of vague thoughts and swirling emotions, into specific named things. I gave them full sentences and paragraphs to describe them. Then I was able to work on them.

I then asked “Can I do anything about that?” “What can I do about that?”

Those things I could do something about - I set out plans to work on and those I could not do anything about I let go. I had plans of action which I could proceed to work on.

The next trick I had was trying to deal with what was nagging me - grabbing my attention - a general feeling of anxiety. What was going to happen next?

The fear of the future.

This seemed to be to be a different thing - far more vague, so I called it - uncertainty.

Imagine your whole life is thrown up into chaos and turmoil and you are surrounded by Feminists, man haters (in the family court system), bigoted narcissistic psychopaths (Judges), abusers and accusers (violence, parenting, character, etc) - all attacking you - every part of your being is attacked by government people and strangers (lawyers, etc - the grifters) - putting your life at risk and threatening the safety of your children, your parents, your family and everyone’s future, financially, emotionally and in every other way. This is the family court system and all courts and media in Australia now.

This type of issue is also written about here:

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/The_Consolation_of_Philosophy
<https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Boethius>

But instead of Boethius and his exploration of some grounding certainty to balance the confusion and uncertainty - I did not use the God argument. I saw the God argument as a bit of a self-referential problem and I will explain why a bit further on.

There is a need for humans to have some grounding when faced with initial self-reference and recursion. Some have experimented with nihilism, anarchy, and Bacchus
<https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Dionysus>

I needed to do something about it so I explored it a bit, calling it “uncertainty”, and then I invented “certainty” to try to counter-act it. What could I attach to “certainty” to ground myself? I needed at least one certainty somewhere.

I was aware of the common certain argument - God and then virtue (being a “good” boy) - which all seemed very dangerous to me and very far removed from exploration, discovery, joy and invention and much more related to dogma (which god(s) to choose from? - the history of tribes and war) and totalitarianism. Some had searched outer space and future to find certainty in aliens and science fiction, some tried utopia, George Orwell tried certainty in Catalonia and eventually woke up to himself and some tried “science” and maths - which, as we know - is fundamentally flawed as much as anything else. (see my articles about monty hall, the power law, chaos, probability, Pythagoras (he became smug in his certain dogma), Archimedes, Nash, Game theory, etc)

So what characteristics should this certainty have? I did not want it to be a “Bad” certainty like I am better than others, I am more deserving, I am special , I have talent - these all seemed narcissistic and self centered - I don't like those people who walk around displaying this smug certain idiocy. It does not seem Good - it seems Bad for some reason. (maybe I want to be a good boy after all? - or maybe just not a bad one - maybe a decent human - but How do I become certainly “decent” - TOO VAGUE!) I also did not want to be a virtue signaler. See 15 Humanism – Corruption – Nation Choice – Virtue, Version 1, date 03/04/2020 <https://humanistman.com/wp-content/uploads/2020/04/15-Humanism-Corruption-Nation-Choice-Virtue.pdf>

So how to find a strong certainty - some permanence and some strong definition - some actual very real thing that can expressed and BELIEVED IN. Not just parroted and repeated - not just “maybe” or “sometimes” or “it depends”.

But it must be about me and my actions - something connected to me - a real belief - not just “the world is round and I believe it” - something about the character of me - some attempt to anchor a point on the continuum between BAD and GOOD. Some place for me to start to explore - something to measure my own actions against. But also too it needs to be one that has little to do with other people as possible. It might at best invoke a detailed philosophical discussion when exposed but not all out war and disagreement. An arguable belief avoiding instant war.

Now you might have your own thoughts on this and your own techniques but I started with “I will not kill anyone”. But what about accidents? What if .. then all different scenarios played out in extremes where this strong belief could not be given. I needed to find something I could invest my personal certain belief in. I struggled with many things and thought about it. Eventually I came up with "I will not rob a bank". But what if... again I went through the scenarios but I pushed them all aside and made my statement more and more certain until I finally made a decision saying "I will not rob a bank" and I believed it.

I did not have to visit my certainty again - it was only as a grounding which has allowed me to explore more and investigate and think about other things without being framed by people into some deluded version of their "Good" framework. - Their certain "God".

But my certainty could still be attacked for not being "Good enough" - e.g. people would continue to try to frame me into their delusions of "good". So I don't tell them of my certainty so they can attack it - it is after all a personal thing and not for constant grandiose public display we see so often in the delusional psychopaths in politics, media, feminists, binaries, zealots, public service, courts, charities, etc.

A review of Corruption – Measurement and Implementation <https://humanistman.com/wp-content/uploads/2020/01/Corruption-Measurement-and-Implementation.pdf> would provide the reader with more context and detail about the reason for this approach.

Certain Gods of Blame, Salvation and Hope

Gods of certainty take many different forms over many years in different cultures - all feeding the binary certain view of the world.

Gods of salvation "keeping us safe" are particularly strong in the human mind (Women, weak minded men and binary extremists) driven by the high anxiety that many people prod and poke out of habit, malice or greed. Praying to gods to keep you safe or sacrificing large sums of money to grafters, grafters and charlatans, to keep you certainly safe, has a long history and takes many different forms.

The power of the gods of salvation is increased by having a perpetrator to complete the binary extreme drama triangle. So this becomes the god of blame, the devil, the demon and is generalized in a groupthink way to the outsider and the "other". The gods of certain salvation can easily become the gods of righteous violence, anger and abuse at the designated perpetrator. The Mobs enjoy violence and abuse as long as it's the "right" kind of violence and abuse - this goes back to bloodsports but further back genetically to some kind of "fight" mechanism instead of "flight" in a general fight for survival.

When Gough Whitlam said 'Well might we say "God save the Queen" - because nothing will save the Governor General' - he was both declaring his belief in gods of certain salvation belonging to those we (the mob) admire and damning those he despised to "burn in hell" without any hope of salvation from the certain salvation gods in a binary groupthink smuglifunt way.

The gods of hope take much different forms and are very different from the whiny victim narrative of the "Lord's Prayer" - where the certain god takes responsibility and accountability away from the individual. (There is always sometime to blame when you have certain gods of salvation and blame - i.e. salvation from what - exactly? - the perpetrator?). The constant meme, dogma repeated ad-nauseam promoting blind obedience, a lack of genuine inquiry and binary certainty.

Hope cannot be bought with indulgences of sacrifices - then it would become a bargain with the devil/genie. Hope, by its very definition, is not certain. We can have a general hope without being specific - a hope to be better, to do better, to make less mistakes, to learn, to engage with life, to not be afraid when fear would overcome and paralyze us.

It takes real energy and effort to invest in hope.

When Alexander the Great prayed to the Gods of fear and dread (phobos and deimos) the night before battle - he was having an internal dialogue. He was talking to himself about how he might behave and what choices he would make the next day. He spoke about the possibilities- he faced and named his fears and hoped that he could overcome those fears. He took responsibility and accountability for his fears and would pray to the god of fear next time before the next battle - always hoping to do better. In this way - the prayer to the God of fear is not a groupthink and mob virtue signaling in big churches - it is a private individual activity to a public god figure - the internal human condition externalized - fear, dread, love, ambition, wealth, fertility, health, trade, etc.

Gods of hope for agriculture, thunder, lightning, storms, law, order, childbirth and justice and many others - were important because they named the things which concerned humans and gave them forms, narratives and examples to examine. The Human Condition expressed physically, narratively and sufficiently abstracted to allow reminder, exploration , debate and learning. Individuals could have some frame to start with.

Once the binary mob of certainty took hold then this becomes weaponized for certain greed, power, constant sacrifice and brutal demonization of "others".

*Such characters in colour dim I mark'd

 Whereat I thus: "Master, these words import Hard meaning." He as one prepar'd replied:
 "Here thou must all distrust behind thee leave;
 Here be vile fear extinguish'd. We are come

 To mine, with pleasant looks, whence I was cheer'd, Into that secret place he led me on.*

The Mob has no fear of consequence and lack of intellect (how can they? - they are a mob not an individual) they are driven by power, greed, self interest - full on corruption. We see this in politicians, the legal community, elites, Magistrates (especially in Canberra but most the legal community in Australia seems corrupt), media (the ABC), feminists, women (on average), etc - there is no consequence for their behaviour - there is no need to pray to any god in the hope to do better, to be better, to learn more, to try, etc. They are smug, complete, binary certain smuglifunts. Their identity is complete and the staring constantly into their mirror of certainty (narcissism) is all they want to do until they wither and die - deluded - Narcissus - psychopaths.

“While he is drinking, being attracted with the reflection of his own form, seen in the water, he falls in love with a thing that has no substance; and he thinks that to be a body, which is but a shadow. He is astonished at himself, and remains unmoved with the same countenance, like a statue formed of Parian marble.⁷⁵ 120 III. 420-450 Lying on the ground, he gazes on his eyes like two stars, and fingers worthy of Bacchus, and hair worthy of Apollo, and his youthful cheeks and ivory neck, and the comeliness of his mouth, and his blushing complexion mingled with the whiteness of snow; and everything he admires, for which he himself is worthy to be admired. In his ignorance, he covets himself; and he that approves, is himself the thing approved. While he pursues he is pursued, and at the same moment he inflames and burns. How often does he give vain kisses to the deceitful spring; how often does he thrust his arms, catching at the neck he sees, into the middle of the water, and yet he does not catch himself in them. He knows not what he sees, but what he sees, by it is he inflamed; and the same mistake that deceives his eyes, provokes them. Why, credulous youth, dost thou vainly catch at the flying image? What thou art seeking is nowhere; what thou art in love with, turn but away and thou shalt lose it; what thou seest, the same is but the shadow of a reflected form; it has nothing of its own. It comes and stays with thee; with thee it will depart, if thou canst but depart thence.”

Narcissus has no imagination - his world is certain, binary and contained - nothing outside himself exists or is worthwhile noticing and learning from.

The external world is brought to us by tales, poems, drama, stories, imagination, questions, dialogues, art, travel, experience, volcanoes, droughts, flooding rains, weather and more.

<http://www.gutenberg.org/ebooks/100> brought stories of the elites - of people, times and places familiar enough to many but the human condition was explored - the questions, the anticipation of what might happen next, the drama - the uncertainty and the discussion it provoked. It was not just about making fun of the “Elites” for the entertainment of the hungry and poor. We see this too in the Arabian Nights and the Play competitions of ancient Greece - this deliberate externalization of complex issues - the horns of a dilemma - the choices and consequences. The internal dialogue and anxiety becomes externalized, by way of examples, dramas, choices, gods, options, reminders - What would Zeus do under these circumstances?, What should/ought have Hamlet done?

Anxiety is exposed for analysis.

I don't have enough information to venture an Hypothesis

Rush to judgement, tantrums, immediate gratification - the spoiled brats and two year old babies (can't control themselves - wetting the bed with hysteria, fear, abuse, outrage, entitlement and accusations) have become adults and practice a deep seated belief in their own opinion - the entitled/victim narrative with a megaphone provided by the ABC and other feminist and virtue signaling organizations.

Feminists who double down on identity and virtue to mask blithering incompetence and are violently protective of their own ignorance of everything. The idea of thinking and exploring a bit more before judging is not the norm in all the Magistrates in A.C.T. courts because they act and behave like women and tantrum throwing children. They fill themselves with themselves - their narcissism - their virtue and their pig-ignorance of everything in the world.

Politicians, media, courts, universities, schools, public services, women (on average) can't think and sell the idea of "virtue" as a substitute for hard work, exploration or development. This determined pig-ignorance is sold and paraded as a virtue by fat, dumb and lazy societies untested by any reality outside of their smug personal and psychopathic delusion.

The very idea of pausing to explore a bit more is alien to most feminists, women (on average) and the weak-minded men who dominate society now - so quick to feel outraged - "right" - "virtuous" - "celebrity" - a rush to an opinion, a judgement and demonization following the drama triangle as long as they, themselves, are the hero/victim.

I might NEED to do a bit more work before I venture an opinion.

Not content with their own smug ignorance they destroy all debate and questions and those who pose a threat to their smug, violent psychopathic delusion. Only the "chosen" can be a decent human being - "women", "heroes", "celebrities", "rich" - the elites - the rest are told they are not even sentient dogs and to be treated as such - worse than a women's pet on an airplane.

I like you, therefore I will listen to your opinion.

The elites will tell you who is entitled to feel like a human being and make sure the courts, politicians, ABC, media and schools drum into you who is to be "respected" (Australian of the Year - don't you know).

An Aside about Flies and the Searching/Choice/Optimisation Issues

A fly flew into my house as I opened the door and explored the whole house in a few seconds and kept flying around looking for something. All these choices were happening very quickly (in my time frame) and expending enormous amounts of energy. A Tree chooses to grow (roots, branches and flowers) and expand based on the soil, climate and weather conditions. I choose to draw the map in Google maps and bring all of my skills and information to the choice of roads and places. Having loaded Barrington Atlas roads, rivers and my maps and Google maps - every choice I make to place a point of a road or settlement is dependent on using enormous amounts of skill and information. I need to assess the climate, rivers, the topography and more. These roman road builders were surveyors and knew how to design bridges but also where best to place roads - from a transport point of view - and sometimes defense - but not everything all at once - compromises are made. Paths of best balanced least resistance. Examining geography, history, science, literature, etc - enables me to get some kind of view of the choices of humans through time. I also see the chaos and interactions. Weather, climate, volcanoes, mass delusions - all recorded in documents and available to any human who has a computer and access to the internet. I do not even need a library card.

Exploring is complex - it is not just maths and models like Paul Levy (Levy flight), Erlang's queue theory, Monty Hall choice and probability, John Forbes Nash - Game theory, - but many other things as well (fat, dumb and lazy - complacency and optimization, fear, chaos) - all feeding into the complexity. Bees, Birds, Fish, hunters, breeders, settlers, choices - many things combined.

A fly is roughly one centimeter long. In a few seconds it has explored/hunted/settled and travelled 30 to 100 metres. This is equivalent (roughly) of humans (1.5 metres long (150 times as much as a fly)) travelling 4,500 to 15,000 metres or 4.5 kilometers to 15 kilometers in say - six seconds. In kilometers per hour terms this represents 150 kilometers per minute which is 9000 kilometers per hour.

But to use the enclosed space model of a fly exploring a house - a fixed space of say 5 by 5 metres - this would represent in human terms (150 times more) 750 metres by 750 metres - which is quite a large area - and searching and exploring (at 9000 kilometers an hour) the space covering 15 kilometers in six seconds. In relative terms - flies and bees - are much faster explorers than humans or trees. Viruses - use their hosts - to spread and explore the space even more effectively (coverage and speed) - exchanging information (DNA) with many individuals and being tested by evolution in a rapid way.

So when I map humanity up to the year 1300 in my Google map (see <https://humanistman.com/>) I am looking at the history of human exploration over millions of years and all the remaining objects - settlements, buildings and collections of people - which survived all of that exploration and choice.

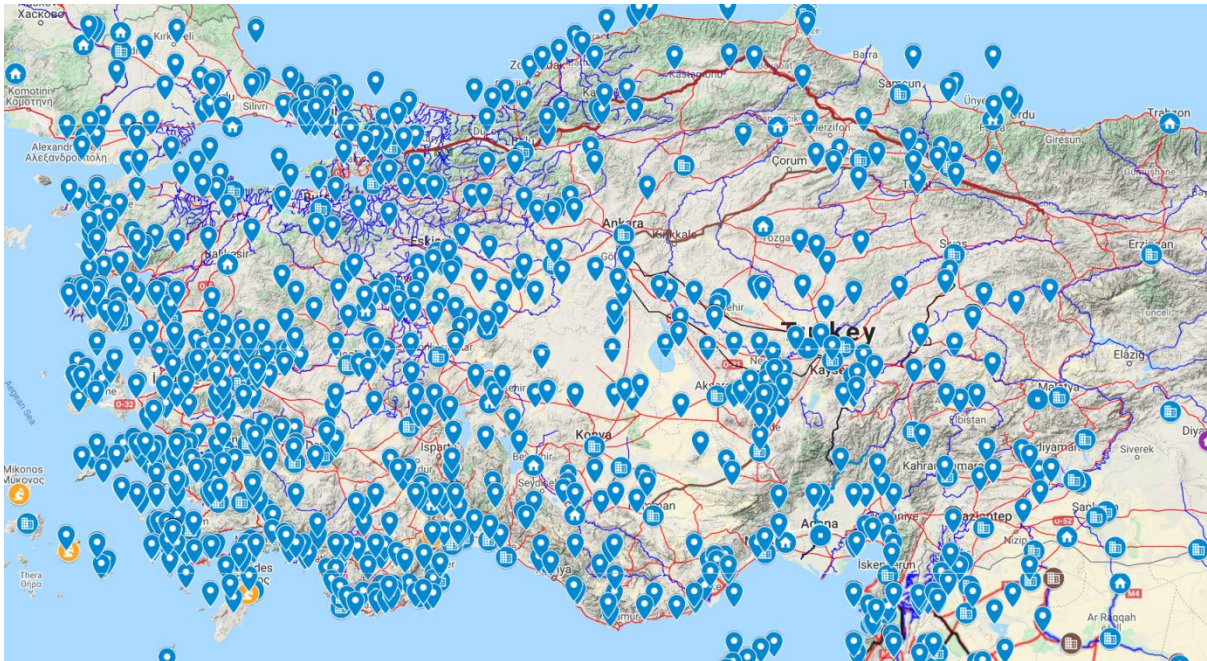

An Hypothesis about Trade Routes through the Middle East for 3000 years to 1300

Some decades ago a Barrington digital Atlas was built costing millions of dollars <http://awmc.unc.edu/wordpress/> - digit mapping information is expanding. Historic texts are being digitized and are searchable <http://www.perseus.tufts.edu/hopper/> . Huge database are being maintained by multiple sites about the planet <https://www.trismegistos.org/index.php> and history <https://vici.org/vici/57256/> - archeology, photos from travelers, papers from scientists and students - <https://www.diva-portal.org/smash/get/diva2:1412801/FULLTEXT01.pdf> . Google maps and Earth provide shared technology to explore. Free large scale software for mapping is available and people are encouraged to use and share information <https://www.qgis.org/en/site/>. This can be a problem for quality as user bias (religious zealots) incompetent, etc - quality can be degraded by multiple "opinions" (lived experience) and a rush to certainty. The role of editor and quality checker has been taken over by extremists and virtue signalers rather than unbiased researchers. (Think ABC and mainstream media, politicians, universities and schools). <https://pleiades.stoa.org/> and Wiki are swamped with information so the task of "information mining" is sifting through vast amounts of duplicated and self-referencing (feedback loop) information to try to discover authentic "insight" and new information.

Free Shape files (SHP) can be loaded into software and converted to KML (Google maps) for simple analysis. I have created my own access database for matching information based on name and latitude/longitude but the time dimensions (year) is also in the "space".

Too big to load in Google maps I am hamstrung/constrained by size so I must decide what is important and note worthy rather than a complete/exhaustive map. I must chose and explore "interesting" and "noticing" to discover what is worth noticing and explain why.

I loaded some Pleiades SHP data into KML to Map and compare but even in TURKEY alone - all it tells me is that Turkey was populated throughout history with many locations mentioned in literature. I have to choose what I think is important to show in my map.

And so it is for anyone who wants to express an opinion about something and tell the world or direct opinion and decisions. There must be some real work, expertise, capability, thought and explanation. Virtue signaling, “lived experience” (I am the entitled victim - wash my feet - do as I say) and “trust me I’m an expert” means very little in reality. The deluded, however, care not for reality.

“Look at me, I donated (your money) to the certain cause (my virtue cup)”

How will I know if and when I have done enough work?

I need to see the work of others and explore the quality, detail, insight and authenticity. It is not a matter of “trust” - this is a matter of exploration - I trust they have done the best THEY can but - because I know about imperfection, sunk cost bias, confirmation bias and other things I need to try to ask some QUESTIONS. It is not personal or a personal attack - although women/black/entitled victims have been trained to adopt this stance (school, respect, 18C, offence, etc).

Some of you have noticed my questions

“What were they thinking?”

“What have I missed?”

The muslim scholars who write research papers <https://www.diva-portal.org/smash/get/diva2:1412801/FULLTEXT01.pdf> are a bit like Cardinal George Pell writing about Gibbons view of history and the fall of Rome

<https://quadrant.org.au/magazine/2021/12/religion-barbarism-and-the-fall-of-the-roman-empire/>
“How much of this is true? What remains outside Gibbon’s portrait of Roman society, not merely of the strengths which provoked Christian expansion, but of the weaknesses, the evils, the vacuum in pagan daily life, which Christian teaching and practice healed? “ .

“God is love/great/certain” type thoughts is the same as “Muslims are great” and all the other sunk cost biases that the binary certain zealots have for their own opinion. The dispassionate researcher might seek to acknowledge their bias - we could call this the “scientific method” but this has been replaced now with feminist certain dogma and opinion by binary extremists, women (on average) and weak minded men. Historically it was done by enthusiastic “historians” using hyperbole and outright fabrication to push their agenda. The certain god of “History” (correlation).

Lord Acton/John Emerich Edward Dalberg-Acton Acton - Lifespan[1834 to 1902] Rank(10)

Keyword(History) https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/John_Dalberg-Acton,_1st_Baron_Acton
<https://www.acton.org/research/lord-acton-quote-archive> <https://oll.libertyfund.org/person/john-emerich-edward-dalberg-lord-acton>

As Catholic “Historians” tried to re-write the evils of the actions of the church throughout history and define the Pope (pontificator) and Catholics as above criticism - Lord Acton took them to task for their psychopathic delusion -“ he wrote to scholar and ecclesiastic Mandell Creighton, dated April 1887, Acton made his most famous pronouncement:

But if we might discuss this point until we found that we nearly agreed, and if we do agree thoroughly about the impropriety of Carlylese denunciations and Pharisaism in history, I cannot accept your canon that we are to judge Pope and King unlike other men, with a favourable presumption that they did no wrong. If there is any presumption it is the other way, against the holders of power, increasing as the power increases. Historic responsibility has to make up for the want of legal responsibility. Power tends to corrupt, and absolute power corrupts absolutely. Great men are almost always bad men, even when they exercise influence and not authority, still more when you superadd the tendency or the certainty of corruption by authority. There is no worse heresy than that the office sanctifies the holder of it. That is the point at which the negation of Catholicism and the negation of Liberalism meet and keep high festival, and the end learns to justify the means. You would hang a man of no position like Ravaiillac; but if what one hears is true, then Elizabeth asked the gaoler to murder Mary, and William III of England ordered his Scots minister to extirpate a clan. Here are the greatest names coupled with the greatest crimes; you would spare those criminals, for some mysterious reason. I would hang them higher than Haman, for reasons of quite obvious justice, still more, still higher for the sake of historical science.”

But Pell also differentiates his “specialness” by using “Pagan” as a general (as a historical habit) derogatory term for categorizing gods - demonize those “others” using language and groupthink. The alternative would be understanding all the similarities and differences (complexity) in these systems of belief and behaviour. Pagan, in this context means: I don't like pagans - I disagree with pagans - as a passive aggressive groupthink type methodology.

Expressing a view on history (an opinion) is fine enough But I am NOT deluded enough to think I am an (highly paid and on national TV every day kind of thing) “expert”. Nor ought I pretend to be. The challenge for me is presenting information in way that everyone can understand and follow my thesis - not to dress it up in “specialness” of any kind (Pharisees, scribes, lawyers, scum, etc). Nor should I personally attack someone because they express a point of view. This is what humanity is based on. The challenge for debate, discussion and learning is ongoing.

All Opinions on TV (Television) are presented as “trust me - I am a celebrity/expert” - not “here are some interesting facts and insights to consider”. Feminists , women (on average) and weak minded men - know no other way of behaving.

Surely, (see Dan Dennett), I ought acknowledge my bias and delusions?

I have made many mistakes on my Map and changed this as I learned new things.

The human travel routes through the middle east - Turkey, Jordan, Syria, Iraq, Iran - etc - is influenced by the geography - the water (seas, rivers), mountains, land - events (earthquakes, seasons, climate, tribes, war, etc). Movement started and places like Turkey, Iraq and Iran became very busy - the natural funnel points of movements of humans. I understand more about Armenia now and how difficult it has been for the people who tried to settle as they were swamped in every direction for thousands of years by people moving through (especially around Van - now in Turkey). It is interesting to me to discover, very recently, remnants of the Elam culture <https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Elam> Elam - Culture[-2700 to -700] which may have moved into the hills from the Sumer Culture <https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Sumer> Sumeria - Culture[-6500 to -2300] and seems to have flourished in safe cities nestled in the mountains - protected by the impassable mountain range, protected by rivers and up hill for anyone wishing to visit (off the main road) - close enough to interact with others but far enough away to survive the constant barrage.

Lordegan/Lordejan/Lurdegan/Lordekan - Historic_Settlement[-3000 to 2022] - 31.51658, 50.81442

As a consequence many art and artifacts remained untouched for thousands of years and have only recently been discovered. Especially on the dead end (tish boom) road up the mountain to the Temple and burial sites. But the nearby city on the trade route Ramhormoz/Samangan/Hormozdgan - Historic_Settlement[-3000 to 2022] 31.2777, 49.59931 - did suffer from battles. Battle of Hormozdgan (224) <https://vici.org/vici/63940/Battle>. Writing developed around the Sumerian time and Elam writing is not related to any other writing on earth

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Elamite_language

Some places were only meeting places or Market places because establishing a city was too dangerous and too unstable. Merv in Turkmenistan become a big fortified settlement and prospered on trade until Genghis Khan sacked and burned it down. it was too big a target - there was too much obvious success - the barbarians were drawn to it.

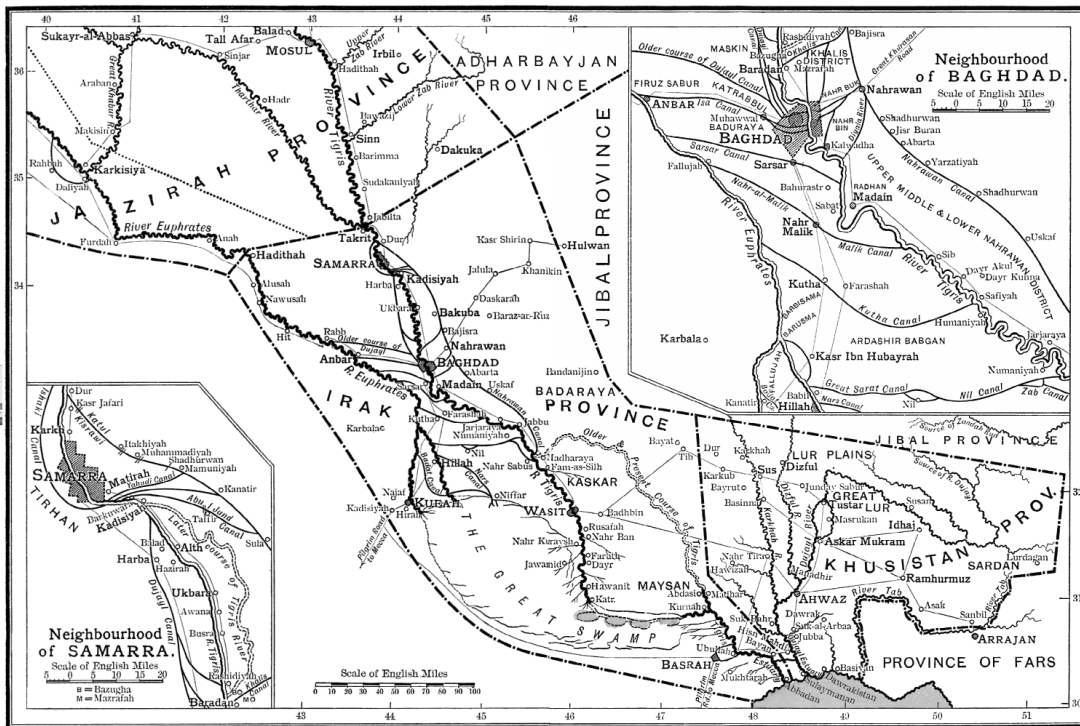

Trade - swapping things for food, salt, money, slaves, life, trinkets (amber, gems), metal, silk, etc - trade routes developed and the explorer/trader was a different type of human than the nomad, tribe or raider. Safe passage - tributes had to be paid to move safely around - trust grew, language developed - the world opened up. Rivers and canals in Iraq became highways through the main travel routes up into Turkey and across the Hellespoint into the rest of Europe or through the Levant and into and out of Africa. Some would use the ports and ships across the Mediterranean and Black Seas and join the roads at different ports. Routes changed as Roads become less safe and more subject to raiders. So the Cities on the routes were obliged to protect the travel routes and travelers if they wanted to main their income from the trade. The Roads through Bulgaria, Serbia, Croatia and Slovenia and/or along the Danube https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Via Militaris was probably more difficult to maintain because of the raiders/barbarian tribes than the lower road to and from the port of Epidamnos/Dyrrhachion/Epidamnos/Durres/Dyrratio - Historic_City[-627 to 2021] on the https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Via Egnatia.

Each city demanding payment and gifts as the traveler passed - fair dealing and repeated trade emerged.

Babylon grew because of the river traffic and the easier travel by water rather than by foot, camel and horse. Large canals for irrigation and travel were built and maintained for centuries. But it became a target - it became wealthy and obvious - the cost of being at the cross roads.

Searching For Frames

Many people will work through all the religions in an effort to settled on one belief system to quell their anxiety and give them enough certainty to examine life - they will shop around a bit to find the ones they like - power, money, women, control, virtue, certain death - or whatever they think they want and need.

Those who are not surrounded by religions and other forms of groupthink and tribalism - tend to develop more individualism and frames which can change and are more malleable and adjustable. At one extreme is the incoherent (not only hypocrisy - but a constant untethered hypocrisy) psychopath and the other extreme the dogmatic certainties. Having sufficient food, standard of living, living long enough, being able to communicate, read and travel - are things which improve this ability.

The traveler and explorer examines the universe and people in it - their frames - their universes - firstly to record and then to try to explore and understand the frames themselves. In this way the generation and number of frames of reference increase and the explorer can quickly switch between one frame and the next depending on context. They can also work to integrate their frames and recognize which ones they can accept in some circumstances and which ones they cannot. These become frames for navigation through different places and customs with a kind of meta frame connected to a variety of lower level frames. We see these explorations recorded in books and other records in libraries around the world - many dating to 5000 years ago and more.

Reading helps build a view of alternative frames and universes and the popularity of drama, art, poetry is a kind of societal measure of the thirst for developing frames (learning and exploring) rather than the ritualized drama narratives of certainty - the certain books - the certain stories and songs. Sports (Olympics and blood sports) in Greek and Roman times also seems to be some kind of societal measure - maybe cohesion and eventually non-lethal tribalism.

Scientists and explorers will see things they do not understand and they will do many things simultaneously - without a fixed agenda. They will sometimes put the issue to "one side for a while".

They will think on it - time will pass. They will do other things. They will deliberately explore something they have not done before. They will talk with others and seek new experiences. Then they will re-examine the issue they have trouble understanding. They will experiment and hypothesize. Mistakes will be made. They will devote enough attention on it as fits with their other explorations.

The certain dogmatists (feminists and other extremists) are pig-ignorantly certain of their frames.

This choice - searching for other frames - is not a single minded extreme devotion - it fits with the exploration of the universe in general - frames emerge and develop - Things are seen in a "new light". Sufficiency of focus - sufficiently vague and sufficiently certain.

It will come to me in time.

Predicting Certainty - Choice and the Future

This represents a problem area for most humans. In each main part of this process as described in my Activation Model above 13 Humanism – Activation, Version 1, date 30/09/2019 <https://humanistman.com/wp-content/uploads/2019/09/13-Humanism-Activation.pdf>, mistakes are made and things are not well understood. Some people delude themselves and others that they know the future and understand probability

7. Observation, 8. Probability, 9. Measurement, 10. Hypothesis and choice.

We cannot observe very well, measurements are flawed and biased, probability is not well understood and has flaws in it and we are biased in our hypothesis and choice.

Mathematicians still do not understand probability and chaos and still make basic mistakes - experts are fallible. Certain experts are wrong.

Each person seems to make up their own methods for this although there are some areas of human development which have grown over the years.

Some context for this is the real human need to assuage the fear of choices or what the future holds. Soothsayers, witches, gods of certainty, Magi, “experts”, games of chance - have all played their part in history.

People want to make a choice to give them a good outcome and they want to know the future (will my crops fail).

Gullible humans are prepared to pay large amounts of money for certainty and prediction (financial “advisors”, Fortune “tellers”, witches, epidemiologists, tacticians, modelers, Pharisees, “magic”, etc) - big money is made by advisors of certainty and consequences seem strangely non-existent (it was god’s will?) - except for the witches of the 1500’s. “Even if it does rain there will not be enough water to fill the Dams” (“Professor” - Australian of the year a few years ago). Or the ABC who call out the vigilante mob before a trial or court case and “Predict” the guilt of a man before any due process has taken place and fail to apologize when they were wrong when they publically condemn people. (although why use the media to condemn anyone anyway? It is not due process is it? Why not await

See Veritasium (Derek Muller) - A Physics Prof Bet Me $10,000 I'm Wrong https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=yCsgoLc_fzI. (The faster than wind car driven by the wind) See Building the Vehicle Physicists Called Impossible (feat. Veritasium) <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=VUgajGv4Aok> . This is because they know enough maths to use formulas but formulas tend to be more complex and uncertain than they think. Maths is at best an approximation.

The world is more complex and uncertain than any formulas and models we can make.

When we look at repeated events over time we start to get into exploring the idea of probability and choice and fall into habits using our biases - see Time Reaction Pattern Habit Plan <https://humanistman.com/wp-content/uploads/2021/05/Time-Reaction-Pattern-Habit-Plan.pdf>

In Corruption – Extremists <https://humanistman.com/wp-content/uploads/2020/01/Corruption-Extremists-Feedback.pdf> I created an excel spreadsheet from internet information <https://humanistman.com/wp-content/uploads/2020/01/Corruption-Extremists-Feedback-Spreadsheet.xlsx> of many biases and paradoxes. Math has quite a few that most people do not understand and many people argue about. Some of them go back to the basic initial self-reference and recursion issue but many don't recognize it as that.

I will now explore the fundamental problem with prediction by using math models. You get some hint of this in my articles about the power law Integer – Ratio – Power Law – Chaos <https://humanistman.com/wp-content/uploads/2020/12/Integer-Ratio-Power-Law-Chaos.pdf>

Let us revisit the Monty Hall choice problem - on the face of it a really simple example of choice and outcome. Paul Erdős had trouble understanding this but could not explain it - now I think I can help explain it.

Paul Erdős - Lifespan[1913 to 1996] Rank(20) Keyword(Maths)
https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Paul_Erd%C5%91s <https://www.ams.org/notices/199801/vertesi.pdf>

Monty Hall Problem https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Monty_Hall_problem using Bayes Theorem https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Bayes%27_theorem and https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Bayesian_probability

This is complicated stuff and still being debated - mostly around rules and “beliefs” and prior and posterior “knowledge” affecting decisions. At the heart of it is the argument that a degree of certainty exists (probably) when you adjust rules and the condition of the games (choice). See Nash Equilibrium https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Nash_equilibrium. (Many recent Nobel prizes have been for Game theory). Much of this is about defining the game - but as I have said before - humans are not pawns in a "game" to be "played". Navigating Chaos is one of our special skills.

So certainty of statistical outcomes (repeated events) based on rules, assumptions and how the games are set-up - highly bounded and constrained in certain ways. It is almost self-referential isn't it? I will define a game and then calculate the outcomes and call it certain probability. (the expert/dogmatic model - versus a useful hypothesis which generally works well (gravity))

At the meta view, it is not absurd for me to imagine infinite Monty hall games set up everywhere - all over the planet where a choice is to be made. It is also not absurd to image infinite players. Then it is a matter of defining the choice as life or death. But each Monty hall game is different - there is an infinity of ways do die and only one non-death door in each game of three doors. The statistical assertion that each human should always change their choice of door having been SHOWN death behind one of the three doors has made Monty part of the game. But we could imagine we sit in front of the three doors (quietly getting on with our lives) waiting for a death to emerge from one of the doors and when it does emerge we quickly run to the door which is not the door we first chose as the "safe" door. But again - death could randomly emerge from any of the three doors - Monty is not there to show us and there could be death behind all doors or life behind all of them. It is not a controlled game. We always come down to the choice of do nothing or do something.

So in infinite random uncontrolled real life events EVEN when our choices are reduced to two the result is not the same as the Monty hall problem. Chaos, uncertainty and complexity play a much bigger role in uncontrolled events and most modelers and experts either hide this (as their special expensive code "magic" - their assumptions) or do not understand it.

So let us look at vaccine mandates and the gamblers' fallacy https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Gambler%27s_fallacy - the idea the events are related. According to the current understanding of probabilities - If you buy a lottery ticket every day (200,000 times) you have exactly the same chance of winning every day. If you buy 200,000 tickets in one lottery you have more chance of winning. If it comes up in dice games 6 heads in row then it can probably do that for ever - it does not have to come up tails because there have been so many heads in a row. it is not "due" to have tails.

You are likely to catch a virus based on how many people are infected - not on whether they have had a vaccine or not. This is obvious. So the next idea is claiming that those people who are not vaccinated are more like to be infected that those who are vaccinated. This is sometimes conflated with the idea that those people are not vaccinated will have a greater viral load and hence be more transmissible. (two probabilities- infected and transmissible)

So each event of coming on contact with a person is a new event (like a daily lottery). But going to the MCG and shaking everyone's hand at a large football match containing 200,000 people in the stadium would, according to current event based probability formulas, give a different probability. It is not easy to see how these scenarios are different other than by self-referencing the formula and statistics which support this (Correlation). It is not obvious how or why and, to some extent, I have decided that there is an overlap and these approximate formulas are at the extremes of a probability continuum - the difference between multiple events and a group gathering. It is a bit fractal and chaotic than those simple probability statements. We might call it "the luck of the draw" and uncertainty or limits to certainty. I looked at this in some articles but specifically the complexity of vaccines in What Were You Thinking <https://humanistman.com/wp-content/uploads/2021/07/What-Were-You-Thinking.pdf> in the context of populations and continuums.

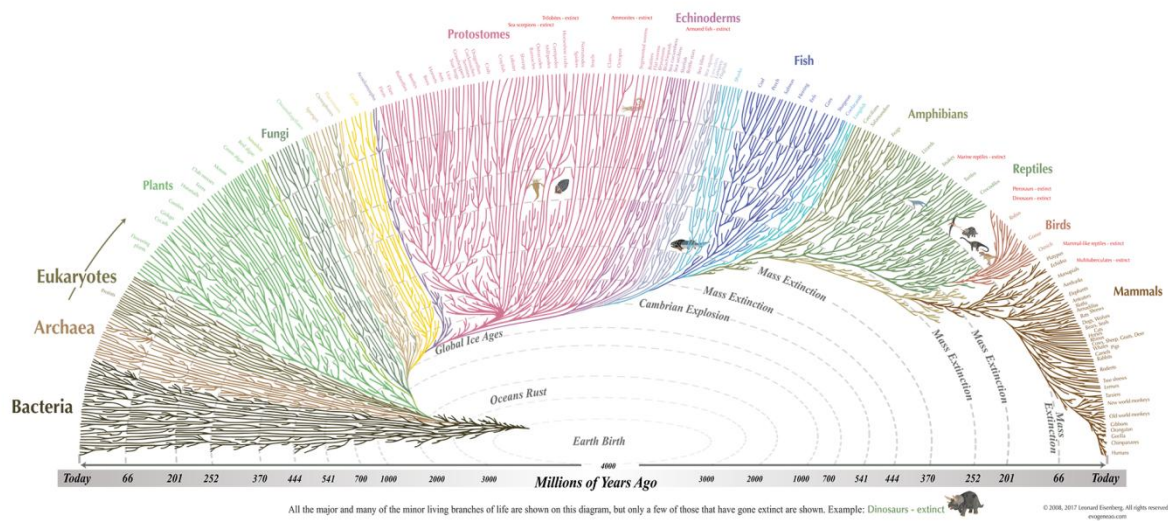

Some people are now claiming that if you get vaccinated then you will not get infected. (delusion and insanity) They say things like “believe the science” and believe the experts (soothsayers, Pharisees, etc). They seem to have misunderstood what the definition and purpose of a vaccine is. It is tested by infecting people in a double blind test - some with placebos and some with the vaccine. It is designed to encourage the body (the vaccinated person) to fight the infection and reduce the harmful effects of being infected. It is highly “Controlled” so as to calculate the probability. Very few of the “experts” or vaccine producers have told people that it is a fallacy to think you will not get infected - (It is not in their commercial interest) and government and health officials have decided to manipulate and coerce the people to follow their certain dogma - rather than tell the whole truth about how these things work. Hence statistics have been misused, definitions and measurements have been corrupted and deliberately biased and probabilities have been exaggerated to ramp up fear and obedience.

	People lie by omission. For example politicians will say “look at how much money we are spending on women” (Emphasis) while failing to say how little they spend on men and how badly men are treated (Omission). This constant lying becomes a “virtue” in their deluded psychopathic minds. Look how “Good” I am. Keeping Koalas safe while ignoring bigger issues. Health officials will say “We are keeping you certainly “safe” - while failing to stay who they are killing and what Draconian laws they have introduced to ruin your lives - “your life and your children’s lives are ruined but your life is saved”

“Our vaccine will eliminate this virus from your family, country, the planet.” (give us all your money for our prediction of certainty)

Viruses are very old - they are most likely the original “First nation” - it is their planet - time for us (the “others”) to return to our own planet (the earth is as old (4.6 billion years) as one third the life of the universe (13.8 billion years) - viruses are nearly as old as planet earth)

<https://www.evogeneao.com/en/learn/tree-of-life>

Politicians and health officials (weak minded men and feminists (binary extremists)) say things like “you don’t want your loved ones to die - then get vaccinated”. This is the same as the Save the Koalas campaign “You don’t want Koalas to die - then donate money and fill your cup of certain virtue”. It is manipulation based on guilt delivered in passive aggressive kind of way. You are being “Framed” by their chosen frame where they personally are “Good” or even the “victim” of you not doing what they say.

The reason they do this (apart from being delusional psychopaths) is because they do not understand probability and even if they did they could not explain it to people in any sensible way. They want to control your choices (totalitarian, certain dogma). They also use “the ends justifies the means” and “whatever it takes” to inflict their certainty on everyone else. Their certainty is invested in the Frames. The frames they use are usually the women are victims frame and that that they are “Good” people - “Saviors” (virtue signaling). Others use certain frames like “religion”, “Save the planet” - usually with a meta-frame that they themselves are “Moral” or “Virtuous” and the “others” are Bad and Evil (the perpetrator).

Reputation and Trust do not count anymore - they don’t mean anything to these people. Their frame of certainty is all they know - they cannot even imagine that there are many different frames. Even if they accepted that there were different frames - their personal meta-frame is that they are “close to God” - Close to certainty. (their virtue cups for certain afterlife need filling)

Life seems to be valued - not in the life you lead - but the constant deluded avoidance of certain death! This where the profiteers of fear step in.

If you get vaccinated are your chances of getting infected lower? No.

If you get vaccinated are your chances of fighting the infection effectively, higher? Yes.

This is the science. <https://www.cdc.gov/vaccines/hcp/conversations/understanding-vacc-work.html>

So what about your chances of transmitting the disease whether you are vaccinated or not? Well this has far more to do with complex factors like events, interactions, individual behaviour and circumstances, etc - the vaccine is one of many factors in complex multivariate (still bound and constrained) analysis and far less important. This is called Factor Analysis.

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Factor_analysis Oversimplification.

Women tend to want the only factor to be gender. Others will say skin colour, religion, etc. This is called a bigoted bias in factor analysis. (framing) A.N.U. and other Australian university researchers always frame their research using feminist victim frames. They call this “right think”, “good bias” and “positive discrimination”.

But this is the complexity and uncertainty which Tyrants hate. They want simplify everything in a binary way. They want to kill complexity and uncertainty itself. So they will treat people like variables in an equation (i.e. not as human beings) which they have control off. I will coerce you, bribe you, threaten you until you bow down to my certainty. The Modelers and the think thanks (the Pharisees and scribes) all take their money advising them what new Dogma and Totalitarian laws they ought introduce - new controls - so the desired result is obtain with certainty. They want to be Monty Hall in everyone’s fixed game.

They will vote for me if I do and say the rights things - I will get more power, money and control

You are deluded if you think you can control a universe and everything in it where you understand close to nothing.

Nearly all politicians are deluded psychopaths who double down on their pig-ignorance and tyranny. They are also deluded when they think that no one else can see how deluded they are (Emperor’s new clothes)

There are a number of conjectures - that the immune response is different, viral load can be different or transmissibility can vary based on whether vaccinated or not. This is even more complex and more “statistical” and correlations - a different type of “science” - conjecture based on measurement and definition across populations. It is a poor hypothesis at best.

See falsifiability.

Karl Popper - Lifespan[1902 to 1994] Rank(10) Keyword(Philosophy Maths Science)

<https://fs.blog/2016/01/karl-popper-on-science-pseudoscience/> , https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Karl_Popper , <https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Falsifiability>

So what we might call science has a range of repeatability and predictability (probability) about it (a continuum) at one end - is the strong hypothesis which can be falsified (highly constrained and bounded) (we tend to use this for medicine and engineering) - at the other end we get conjecture and correlation at best. Hence we get “alternative” medicine - at best - based on observation and statistics and worst, a complete falsehood. (sacrificing chickens to stop volcanoes and earthquakes - keep you “safe”)

So it is with this lack of understanding, ramping up of fear, framing, miss-representation of statistics (lying) and deliberate manipulation that people are being encouraged to demonize those who choose not to get vaccinated for some reason. This pattern has been supported by the bigotry and hatred of feminism (the office of women, keeping women and their children safe, women's only charities and grants, "respect", "White Ribbon", etc) , blacks (aborigines, flags, Black lives "matter"), zealots, idiotology, etc (the binary extremists) to demonize "others" based on identity and to be "special" because of your "identity" - mobs/groupthink/tribalism.

"I don't want to sit on a plane next to unvaccinated person because I will get infected" - the fear based assertion based on a misunderstanding of vaccines, probability and being deliberately misled by "experts", public servants and politicians. And hence Nazi Germany looks familiar and China's re-education camps, and Soviet Russia and all the tyrannies in world history start to take shape. Where will the unvaccinated sit? In a ghetto in Budapest perhaps?

Tolerance - I want everyone else to tolerate my fear and idiocy! Respect!

Why not lock yourself up in your room rather than restrict everyone else based on your fear?

People are deluded to think they understand probability (probable outcomes) and place too much trust in "experts" without question.

"People who are unvaccinated should be excluded from society until they get vaccinated" - once again totalitarianism based on groupthink and a lack of understanding of complexity and probability. Get re-educated into correctthink in Gulags. I am trying to help you - to "save" you - certainly.

How to destroy any humanity with all of your anxiety and fear.

If you are presented with statistics that say black people are 10% more likely (statistically) to kill you than white people (binary/groupthink) - should you demonize black people? Why not? What percentage then? Surely it's a binary thing - or is it plurality? Facing your fears of choice and future? Or do you just love playing the certain game of bigotry and groupthink? What are you? - a blackfella?

What about Muslim, Feminist and other binary extremists are more likely to be corrupt and violent than non-binaries? Should you demonize binaries? Re-educate them? Put a Tattoo on their forehead?

What about women (on average) are less intelligent and capable than men - should you not employ women? Do you understand groupthink/plurality/choice and probability yet?

So we seem to be living in the "dark ages" - where the feminists, binary extremists, women (on average) and weak minded men are not only proud and bloody minded (literally) in their determined pig-ignorance of the universe - but also filling their cups of smug virtue by demonizing "others" and encouraging mob and vigilante violence to anyone who dares to question their smug, psychopathic delusions. This has happened many times and in many places throughout human history.

Limits to Certain Predictive Models

We can learn about framing our limits to certainty by examining and researching things. We know about uncertainty, chaos, measurement (precision and accuracy), bias, definition and other basic problems. Let us look at the brilliant Fourier transform model that Lord Kelvin built to predict tides which Derek Muller on Veritasium explains in context here The Most Powerful Computers You've Never Heard Of <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=lqF3OX8nT0w> .

Lord Kelvin/William Thomson - Lifespan[1824 to 1907] Rank(20) Keyword(Math, Computing, Physics) https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/William_Thomson,_1st_Baron_Kelvin https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Tide-predicting_machine <https://mathshistory.st-andrews.ac.uk/Biographies/Thomson/>

We know chaos exists yet Lord Kelvin's machine will not produce a chaotic result. This is because it is not iterative - the output result is not feed back into the input process. It is not recursive. It is a fixed model - once the machine is built it will produce good results as long as the basic input cycles do not significantly change.

The model is also an approximation - there really is a feedback mechanism with the tides - it is just that it happens on such a large timescale (sun, planet, earth cycles change) we tend to ignore it in the model.

We know that weather is chaotic and that models cannot predict the weather as certainly as Lord Kelvin's model - because it continues to take in new measurements which change the "wheels of certainty". It has a feedback loop that changes frequently.

We also know that there are many unknown cycles (we can't see them) - rogue waves appear in the sea unpredictably as feedback and timing converge at the same time. Seas can seem perfectly calm (before the storm) because all the cycles are about to come around to peaks.

Mitchell Jay Feigenbaum - Lifespan[1944 to 2019] Rank(60) Keyword(Math, Computing)
https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Mitchell_Feigenbaum
<https://writings.stephenwolfram.com/2019/07/mitchell-feigenbaum-1944-2019-4-66920160910299067185320382/> <https://mathshistory.st-andrews.ac.uk/Biographies/Feigenbaum/>

To explore the difference - the Sun, Moon and Earth move in a time frame which is quite large to us. These are the longest cycles we know. The weather - and even our own personal human interactions are much more complicated and work in much smaller time scales. Atoms and their components are operating at speeds close to the speed of light. Viruses and our internal cellular body mechanisms operate at quite fast speeds and we know our brains can cycle from around 4 cycles to 32 cycles per second (hertz)

Yet Atoms make up everything - so we seem to have some hierarchy/continuum of size/matter which affects the cycles.

I explored many of these and similar problems here Equality – Diversity – Measurement - Notice
<https://humanistman.com/wp-content/uploads/2020/08/Equality-Diversity-Measurement-Notice.pdf>

We tend to model things in the asserted Pythagorean/Euclid/Newtonian dimensions rather than 12 or more dimensions as string theory and Quantum physics continue to explore.

95% of our observable universe is dark matter and dark energy (Lord Kelvin initially explored this idea) - we cannot see or explain what it is (prove, predict and use).

<https://science.nasa.gov/astrophysics/focus-areas/what-is-dark-energy>

So our predictive models can be framed as being aware of less than 5% of “things” - an approximation - in a space/time dimension which we do not really understand - with feedback loops of cycles we cannot see or measure which will produce chaotic results.

This puts a context on the ideas of probability, certainty and predictive modeling for making “choices”. This goes along with the definitional, language and philosophical issues of initial self-reference and recursion - One Thing I Know With Absolute Certainty is Absolute Certainty Does Not Exist <https://humanistman.com/wp-content/uploads/2019/07/Absolute-Certainty.pdf>

Politicians Save the Planet rather than fix the Roads and Water systems

Grandiose delusion seems to infect politicians. Apparently they have solved all of the mundane problems that face their local society (which is their main job) and have now moved on to discovering their God of certainty to fill their cups of everlasting virtue for solving humankind’s and planet’s problems.

Delusions of grandeur by pumped up public servants, dim-witted politicians, magistrates and other elites.

Most pumped up binary certaintists never reach a stage of development where they have any idea how pig-ignorantly stupid they are.

School children are raised by feminist, green, binary thinking zealots to spend the rest of their lives “saving the planet”, “ending all poverty”, “spreading the word of certain God”, “insert your personal cause here”. Learning and developing is not their agenda.

If global warming is a problem then maybe Andrew Barr could make sure we could swim in the Lake to cool down without poisoning ourselves from all the scum and muck that he has failed to look at while he is concentrating on saving the planet. Clean the lake (Is there a certain flag for that?) is a very local and important problem that he will ignore so he can signal his virtue on “Human Rights” and “Women”. Isn’t swimming in the water a human right?

The public service becomes slaves to the virtue of the “mighty leader” and their “visions” of delusion. Who needs to concentrate on doing their job properly when “virtue” is everything?

50 years of propaganda and delusion has ensured that Feminists and most women in Australia - only work for themselves and care little about the rest of society - working for women is their “virtue” cause. Permanent narcissistic bigotry based on a constant entitled victim narrative - special humans - special victims. Being self-centered comes naturally and this is expressed as “virtue” for women’s causes - in a smug, bigoted, delusional way.

“Maximus was one of those who had been saturated with the wisdom of Aedesius; moreover he received the honour of being the teacher of the Emperor Julian. After all his relatives had been put to death by Constantius, as I have recorded with more details in my account of Julian, and the whole |429 family had been stripped bare, Julian alone was left alive, being despised on the score of his tender years and his mild disposition. Nevertheless, eunuchs from the palace took charge of him, and were assigned to keep watch so that he might not waver from the Christian faith. But even in the face of these difficulties he displayed the greatness of his genius. For he had their books so thoroughly by heart that they fretted at the scantiness of their erudition, since there was nothing that they could teach the boy. Now since they had nothing to teach him and Julian had nothing to learn from them, he begged his cousin's permission to attend the schools of the sophists and lectures on philosophy. He, as the gods so willed, permitted this, because he wished Julian to browse among books and to have leisure for them, rather than leave him to reflect on his own family and his claim to empire. After he had obtained this permission, since ample and abundant wealth from many sources was at his disposal,⁶³ he used to travel about accompanied by the emperor's suspicions and a bodyguard, and went where he pleased. Thus it was that he came to Pergamon, following on the report of the wisdom of Aedesius. But the latter was by this time far on in years, and his bodily strength was failing. First and foremost of all his students were Maximus, about whom I am now writing, Chrysanthius of Sardis, Priscus the Thesprotian or Molossian, and Eusebius who came from Myndus, a city of Caria. On being allowed to study under Aedesius, Julian, who was old for his boyish years, in amazement and admiration of his vigour and the divine qualities of his soul, refused to leave him, but like those who had |431 been bitten by the snake ⁶⁴ in the story he longed to drink down learning open-mouthed and at a gulp, and to win his end used to send Aedesius gifts worthy of an emperor.”... “Maximus is one of the older and more learned students, who, because of his lofty genius and superabundant eloquence scorned all logical proof in these subjects and |435 impetuously resorted to the acts of a madman. Not long since, he invited us to the temple of Hecate and summoned many witnesses of his folly. When we had arrived there and had saluted the goddess: 'Be seated,' said he, 'my well-beloved friends, and observe what shall come to pass, and how greatly I surpass the common herd.' When he had said this, and we had all sat down, he burned a grain of incense and recited to himself the whole of some hymn or other, and was so highly successful in his demonstration that the image of the goddess first began to smile, then even seemed to laugh aloud. We were all much disturbed by this sight, but he said: 'Let none of you be terrified by these things, for presently even the torches which the goddess holds in her hands shall kindle into flame.' And before he could finish speaking the torches burst into a blaze of light. Now for the moment we came away amazed by that theatrical miracle-worker. But you must not marvel at any of these things, even as I marvel not, but rather believe that the thing of the highest importance is that purification of the soul which is attained by reason." However, when the sainted Julian heard this, he said: "Nay, farewell and devote yourself to your books. You have shown me the man I was in search of." After saying this he kissed the head of Chrysanthius and started for Ephesus. There he had converse with Maximus, and hung on to him and laid fast hold on all that he had to teach. Maximus persuaded him to summon thither the divine Chrysanthius also, and when this had been done the two of them barely sufficed to satisfy the boy's great capacity for acquiring this kind of lore."

'And when the accused defended himself by denying the charge, and could not be confuted on any point, Delphidius, a very vigorous speaker, assailing him violently and, exasperated by the lack of proofs, cried: "Can anyone, most mighty Caesar, ever be found guilty, if it be enough to deny the charge?" be enough to have accused him?" And this was one of many like instances of humanity' -

1. Ammianus Marcellinus Roman Antiquities Book XIV Constantius and Gallus
https://penelope.uchicago.edu/Thayer/E/Roman/Texts/Ammian/14*.html 1 After the survival of the events of an unendurable campaign,³ when the spirits of both parties, broken by the variety of their dangers and hardships, were still drooping, before the blare of the trumpets had ceased or the soldiers been assigned to their winter quarters, the gusts of raging Fortune brought new storms upon the commonwealth through the misdeeds, many and notorious, of Gallus Caesar.⁴ He had been raised, at the very beginning of mature p5 manhood, by an unexpected promotion from the utmost depths of wretchedness to princely heights, and overstepping the bounds of the authority conferred upon him, by excess of violence was causing trouble everywhere. For by his relationship to the imperial stock, and the affinity which he even then had with the name of Constantius,⁵ he was raised to such a height of presumption that, if he had been more powerful, he would have ventured (it seemed) upon a course hostile to the author of his good fortune. 2 To his cruelty his wife was besides a serious incentive, a woman beyond measure presumptuous because of her kinship to the emperor, and previously joined in marriage by her father Constantine with his brother's son, King Hanniballianus.⁶ She, a Megaera⁷ in mortal guise, constantly aroused the savagery of Gallus, being as insatiable as he in her thirst for human blood. The pair in process of time gradually became more expert in doing harm, and through underhand and crafty eavesdroppers, who had the evil habit of lightly adding to their information and wanting to learn only what was false and agreeable to them, they fastened upon innocent victims false charges of aspiring to royal power or of practising magic. 3 There stood out among their lesser atrocities, when their unbridled power had already surpassed the limits of unimportant delinquencies, the sudden and awful death of one Clematius, a nobleman of Alexandria. This man's mother-in-law, it was said, had a violent passion for her son-in-law, but p7 was unable to seduce him; whereupon, gaining entrance to the palace by a back door, she presented the queen with a valuable necklace, and thus secured the dispatch of his death-warrant to Honoratus, at that time Count of the East;⁸ and so Clematius, a man contaminated by no guilt, was put to death without being allowed to protest or even to open his lips. 4 After the perpetration of this impious deed, which now began to arouse the fears of others also, as if cruelty were given free rein, some persons were adjudged guilty on the mere shadow of suspicion and condemned. Of these some were put to death, others punished by the confiscation of their property and driven from their homes into exile, where, having nothing left save tears and complaints, they lived on the doles of charity; and since constitutional and just rule had given place to cruel caprice, wealthy and famous houses were being closed. 5 And no words of an accuser, even though bribed, were required amid these accumulations of evils, in order that these crimes might be committed, at least ostensibly, under the forms of law, as has sometimes been done by cruel emperors; but whatever the implacable Caesar had resolved upon was rushed to fulfilment, as if it had been carefully weighed and determined to be right and lawful. 6 It was further devised that sundry low-born men, whose very insignificance made them little to be feared, should be appointed to gather gossip in all p9 quarters of Antioch and report what they had heard. Then, as if travellers, and in disguise, attended the gatherings of distinguished citizens, and gained entrance to the houses of the wealthy in the guise of needy clients; then, being secretly admitted to the palace by a back door, they reported whatever they had been able to hear or learn, with one accord making it a rule to add inventions of their own and make doubly worse what they had learned, but suppressing the praise of Caesar which the fear of impending evils extorted from some against their will. 7 And sometimes it happened that if the head of a household, in the seclusion of his private apartments, with no confidential servant present, had whispered something in the ear of his wife, the emperor learned it on the following day, as if it were reported by Amphiarus or Marcius, those famous seers of old.⁹ And so even the walls, the only sharers of secrets, were feared. 8 Moreover, his fixed purpose of ferreting out these and many similar things increased, spurred on by the queen, who pushed her husband's fortunes headlong to sheer ruin, when she ought rather, with womanly gentleness, to have recalled him by helpful counsel to the path of truth and mercy, after the manner of the wife¹⁰ of that savage emperor Maximinus, as we have related in our account of the acts of the Gordians. p11 9 Finally, following an unprecedented and destructive course, Gallus also ventured to commit the atrocious crime which, to his utter disgrace, Gallienus is said to have once hazarded at Rome. Taking with him a few attendants with concealed weapons, he used to roam at evening about the inns and street-corners, inquiring of every one in Greek, of which he had remarkable command, what he thought of the Caesar. And this he did boldly in a city¹¹ where the brightness of the lights at night commonly equals the resplendence of day. At last, being often recognized, and reflecting that if he continued that course he would be conspicuous, he appeared only in broad daylight, to attend to matters which he considered important. And all this conduct of his caused very deep sorrow to many. 5 1 The torture of the followers of Magnentius.¹ While this was happening in the East, Constantius was passing the winter at Arelate, where he gave entertainments in the theatre and the circus with ostentatious magnificence. Then, on the 10th of October, which completed the thirtieth year of his reign,²⁰ giving greater weight to his arrogance and accepting every false or doubtful charge as evident and proven, among other atrocities he tortured Gerontius, a count of the party of Magnentius,²¹ and visited him with the sorrow of exile. 2 And, as an ailing body is apt to be affected even by slight annoyances, so his narrow and sensitive mind, thinking that every sound indicated something done or planned at the expense of his safety, made his p31 victory²² lamentable through the murder of innocent men.³ For if anyone of the military commanders or ex-officials,²³ or one of high rank in his own community, was accused even by rumour of having favoured the party of the emperor's opponent, he was loaded with chains and dragged about like a wild beast. And whether a personal enemy pressed the charge or no one at all, as though it was enough that he had been named, informed against, or accused, he was condemned to death, or his property confiscated, or he was banished to some desert island.⁴ Moreover his harsh cruelty, whenever the majesty of the empire was said to be insulted, and his angry passions and unfounded suspicions were increased by the bloodthirsty flattery of his courtiers, who exaggerated everything that happened and pretended to be greatly troubled by the thought of an attempt on the life of a prince on whose safety, as on a thread, they hypocritically declared that the condition of the whole world depended.⁵ And he is even said to have given orders that no one who had ever been punished for these or similar offences should be given a new trial after a writ of condemnation²⁴ had once been presented to him in the usual manner, which even the most inexorable emperors commonly allowed. And this fatal fault of cruelty, which in others sometimes grew less with advancing age, in his case became more violent, since a group of flatterers intensified his stubborn resolution.On their arrival, the racks were made ready and the executioner prepared his hooks and other instruments of torture. Many of the prisoners were proscribed, others driven into exile; to some the sword dealt the penalty of death. For no one easily recalls the acquittal of anyone in the time of Constantius when an accusation against him had even been whispered.

2. THE ROMAN HISTORY OF AMMIANUS MARCELLINUS DURING THE REIGNS OF THE EMPERORS CONSTANTIUS, JULIAN, JOVIANUS, VALENTINIAN, AND VALENS. TRANSLATED BY C.D. YONGE, M.A. <https://www.gutenberg.org/cache/epub/28587/pg28587-images.html> IV.§ 1. At this time also the Saracens, a race whom it is never desirable to have either for friends or enemies, ranging up and down the country, if ever they found anything, plundered it in a moment, like rapacious hawks who, if from on high they behold any prey, carry it off with rapid swoop, or, if they fail in their attempt, do not tarry.² And although, in recounting the career of the Prince Marcus, and once or twice subsequently, I remember having discussed the manners of this people, nevertheless I will now briefly enumerate a few more particulars concerning them.³ Among these tribes, whose primary origin is derived from the cataracts of the Nile and the borders of the Blemmyæ, all the men are warriors of equal rank; half naked, clad in coloured cloaks down to the waist, overrunning different countries, with the aid of swift and active horses and speedy camels, alike in times of peace and war. Nor does any member of their tribes ever take plough in hand or cultivate a tree, or seek food by the tillage of the land; but they are perpetually wandering over various and extensive districts, having no home, no fixed abode or laws; nor can they endure to remain long in the same climate, no one district or country pleasing them for a continuance.⁴ Their life is one continued wandering; their wives are hired, on special covenant, for a fixed time; and that there may be some appearance of marriage in the business, the intended wife, under the name of a dowry, offers a spear and a tent to her husband, with a right to quit him after a fixed day, if she should choose to do so. And it is inconceivable with what eagerness the individuals of both sexes give themselves up to matrimonial pleasures. [Pg 12]⁵ But as long as they live they wander about with such extensive and perpetual migrations, that the woman is married in one place, brings forth her children in another, and rears them at a distance from either place, no opportunity of remaining quiet being ever granted to her.⁶ They all live on venison, and are further supported on a great abundance of milk, and on many kinds of herbs, and on whatever birds they can catch by fowling. And we have seen a great many of them wholly ignorant of the use of either corn or wine.⁷ So much for this most mischievous nation. Now let us return to the subject we originally proposed to ourselves.

If anything of the kind was bruited abroad, he gave himself up to inquisitions with more eagerness than humanity, and appointed for such trials merciless judges; and in the punishment of some he tried to make their death lingering, if nature allowed, in some particulars being even more ruthless than Gallienus in such inquisitions. ¹⁰ As a matter of fact, he was the object of many genuine plots of traitors, such as Aureolus, Postumus, Ingenuus, Valens¹⁰² surnamed Thessalonicus, and several others, yet he often showed leniency in punishing crimes which would bring death to the victim; but he also tried to make false or doubtful cases appear well-founded by excessively violent tortures. ¹¹ And in such affairs he showed deadly enmity to justice, although he made a special effort to be considered just and merciful.

steward of the praetorian prefecture, a man always eager for extreme measures and notorious for his natural depravity. 9 Rufinus at once, as though upborne on wings, flew to the emperor's court and inflamed him, since he was easily influenced by such suspicions, to such excitement that without any deliberation Africanus and all those present at the fatal table were ordered to be quickly hoisted up and carried out"

At that time many wild beasts were burned up, especially lions, which are excessively savage in those regions and usually perish or are gradually blinded in the following manner. 5 Amid the reed-beds and thickets of the Mesopotamian rivers lions range in countless numbers; and during the moderate winter, which is there very mild, they are always harmless.
